Sea Level Snow Paints Hills, Pays San Rafael Rare Visit

Flakes Fall Around All Of Bay Area

Snow capped the hills in Marin County this morning and fell in many low-lying areas as well. The thick flakes melted when they hit the ground in the lowlands, but the Air Force radar station on Mount Tamalpais reported that it had about two and a half inches of snow.

In San Rafael, it was the first snowfall in 19 years.

There were early morning reports of light snow caps on many of the hills in the county, on Barnabe Peak in Samuel P. Taylor State Park and along the ridge at Bolinas.

Snow was reported on the ground at Forest Knolls and Nicasio, and there was enough of it on cars in Sausalito for children to dash out and make snowballs.

In San Rafael, where the big flakes fell for about a half hour, beginning just before 8 a.m., it was the first snowfall since Feb. 14, 1949. Since 1913, there have been only five recorded instances of snowfall in San Rafael.

Low temperatures of 30 were common in the county — it dropped to that at Woodacre and Inverness—and in Bolinas a low of 22 was reported. The Mount Tamalpais radar station also reported 22.

LOW SNOWLINE

The U.S. Weather Station at San Francisco Airport said the snowline was at 1,500 to 2,000 feet during the night and there were several reports of it on hills in the Bay Area. Snow was reported on rooftops in Richmond and Berkeley and on the hilltops around San Jose. The Weather Bureau said it was the result of "cold and unstable conditions."

In addition to delighting the eye, the snow added a little moisture to a dry year in Marin County. There have been 12.97 inches of precipitation thus far, compared to a seasonal average to date of 20.34 inches.

RAIN STILL LAGS

The total is well below that of last year, when 36.21 inches of rain had fallen to this date. But last January is not a month to be desired again, weatherwise. Heavy rains drenched the county, touching off mud slides and widespread flooding and closing roads. In one 24-hour period, more than 11 inches of rain fell and San Rafael totaled 21.08 inches for the month.

It'll be back to regular-type weather tonight and tomorrow,

Cambodian Outposts Attacked

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (UPI)—Cambodian Prince Norodom Sihanouk today charged Peking-directed Communists have "declared war" against his government and attacked guard posts in the northwestern province of Battambang.

The Cambodian chief of state said Peking and Hanoi wanted him to be their "satellite" but warned he would resist "to the last cartridge."

He also said the Communist raids will only drive Cambodia closer to the United States.

In an official announcement, Sihanouk said members of the Sangkum Communist organization simultaneously attacked several guard posts in Battambang "killing some guards and some loyalist citizens." Battambang borders on Thailand which also has been plagued by an increase in Communist guerrilla activities.

Sihanouk said the Communist raiders also stole 50 rifles and forced 500 families to take refuge in the forests.

The prince said Cambodian forces later discovered Communist strongholds where they found "Maoist propaganda

U.N. Debates While U.S. Bolsters Fleet Off Korea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States today pressed its diplomatic efforts to free the USS Pueblo and her 83 men while preparing militarily "for any contingency that might arise."

Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara held a high-level meeting at the State Department with Richard Helms, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, and Gen. Maxwell B. Taylor to discuss North Korea's continued refusal to free the ship and its crew.

The Navy, meanwhile, said it was freezing "until further notice" requests for discharge by the 133,000 reservists serving in drill units. The South Korean government newspaper said a new force of U.S. aircraft carriers and destroyers was moving into the troubled Korean waters. There was no comment from the Pentagon.

SECURITY COUNCIL

In the United Nations, Lord Caradon, British minister of state, said today there is a "sense of outrage" in Britain over the illegal North Korean seizure of the U.S. naval intelligence ship Pueblo on the high seas.

Caradon told the Security Council the Pueblo, which the United States said was seized 21.3 miles off the North Korean coast last Tuesday, was "peacefully carrying out a legitimate purpose."

"As the distinguished representative of the Soviet Union knows," Caradon said, "there are other such ships carrying out similar tasks close to my country."

Sentiment grew among Security Council members to designate Secretary General Thant or another neutral diplomat to negotiate the release of the Pueblo and its 83-man crew. But the body adjourned to Monday without acting.

"What we need to do now," Caradon said, "is to concentrate on the over-riding need to go forward on the basic (1953 Korean truce) agreement which is not in dispute."

Ambassador Endalkachew Makonnen of Ethiopia said the council was disadvantaged by not having full information on what happened in the Pueblo's seizure.

"To overcome this," Makonnen said, "the council should initiate immediately an investigation of the incident. Such an investigation need not take undue time if it has the cooperation of the parties concerned."

Makonnen said the council should invite North Korea to participate in the investigation and to appear and present its case here.

LBJ ADDRESS

In line with measures spelled out by President Johnson in a somber television address to the nation yesterday, U.S. diplomats searched for a bloodless solution to the crisis while military authorities moved to make sure America's forces "are prepred for any contingency that might arise."

The South Korean government newspaper Shinmum in Seoul reported today, meanwhile, that more U.S. aircraft carriers and destroyers were steaming to join the Enterprise. The Pentagon declined to comment.

Johnson, grim and subdued, interrupted almost continuous high-level conferences on the crisis for his television appearance yesterday afternoon.

The softly worded three-minute speech, his first public comment on the Pueblo incident, demonstrated determination to explore all possible diplomatic solutions while the threat of force is held in the background.

Noting that the question was being taken to the Security Council, Johnson said "the best result would be for the whole world community to persuade North Korea to return our ship and our men and to stop the dangerous course of aggression against South Korea."

The President said the Pueblo incident, together with North Korea's attempt to assassinate South Korea's President Jan. 19 and its increased violence along the demilitarized zone, might be a Communist attempt to divert U.S. military resources from Vietnam.

He said pointedly that the buildup of U. S. strength in the Korean area after the Pueblo's hijacking Tuesday did "not involve a reduction in any way of our forces in Vietnam."

Reds Ignoring Own Holiday Season To Shell Marines

SAIGON (UPI)—The Viet Cong's Lunar New Year truce began with the roar of mortar barrages against the threatened U.S. Marine garrison at Khe Sanh and South Vietnamese positions near Saigon, military spokesmen said today.

"As far as observing the truce is concerned, we've seen the rounds hit," said the Khe Sanh commander, Col. David Lownds.

"There is no question in my mind that they are not observing their truce."

Shortly before the truce began a military hospital near Pleiku was hit with mortars and rockets for the second time in a week, U.S. officials said. A GI patient was killed.

There were fresh reports from military sources that North Vietnamese armored vehicles had moved into South Vietnam's northwest corner to back up at least 20,000 Communist troops massed against the Khe Sanh Marines.

U.S. intelligence officials expect a major Communist offensive in the area and officials today announced that 3,500 men of the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division had been moved to the northern area to reinforce the Marines. Details of their position were not revealed.

Military spokesmen said the attack today on Khe Sanh injured 20 Marines. At least 20 rounds hit after the truce was declared, compared with 48 rounds fired all day Saturday, the spokesmen said.

Lownds said there was speculation the big North Vietnamese offensive would be delayed until after the six-day Communist truce but he said he would keep digging in.

"Every day that goes by I hope we're getting a foot deeper," he said.

The Viet Cong-declared truce for the Tet, or Asian New Year, holidays is to end at midnight next Friday. Allied forces agreed to only a 36-hour truce beginning Monday.

B-52 bombers dropped tons of explosives north of Khe Sanh, sending billowing orange fireballs into the air. Smaller fighter-bombers were constantly overhead prepared to hit North Vietnamese positions as Marine patrols on the ground pinpointed them.

Officials reported the loss of the 793rd U.S. warplane over North Vietnam. They said a Navy A4 Skyhawk was downed yesterday but its pilot rescued while two American destroyers fought a gun duel with shore batteries over his head.

Bridge Directors Vote Selves Insurance Hike

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Are the 14 directors of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District worth $2.8 million?

This was the question before directors yesterday as they voted themselves $200,000 death benefits each at a cost of $5,089 for three years. The benefits are paid only if a director dies in an accident while travelling on bridge district business.

The directors, apparently dissatisfied with their $100,000 policies, voted to double the benefits. The three-year premium for the lower coverage, carried by the Continental Casualty Co., was $2,295. The new coverage added $2,794 in premiums.

The vote was 11-2, directors Stephan C. Leonoudakis and John E. Dearman of San Francisco dissenting. Director Edwin M. Fraser of Del Norte County was absent during the vote.

Leonoudakis argued that "public funds" should not be used for "such an unnecessary expense."

"When I go," joked Dearman in an aside, "I want my wife to miss me — and with $200,000 she might not miss me."

Both of Marin's directors, Thomas D. Hardcastle and George H. Ludy, voted for doubling their benefits. Such benefits "are common practice in public agancies," said Hardcastle.

The insurance committee had recommended the doubling of benefits, but held up action on a

Terrorists Kill Security Agent

SAIGON (AP) — Two Viet Cong terrorists on bicycles shot and killed a government security agent outside his house today as he was leaving on a motor scooter, sources reported.

North Viets May Free U.S. Pilots

TOKYO (AP) — North Vietnam announced today it has decided to set free three American pilots captured in the north.

The Vietnam News Agency (VNA), monitored in Tokyo, said the pilots "had shown a repentent attitude during the period of detention" and were being freed in connection with the lunar new year.

It did not identify them or say where they would be released.

Three Nations Search For Missing Israel Sub

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI)—Ships and planes from three "friendly nations" joined Israel today in the hunt for the Israeli submarine Dakar missing in the Mediterranean with 69 crewmen.

"We did not ask the Russians," an Israeli spokesman said.

American, British and Greek aircraft and ships crisscrossed the eastern Mediterranean while some Israelis speculated the submarine had been the victim of the Russian fleet or Soviet-built Egyptian warships.

An Israeli military spokesman, however, stressed there was "no suspicion" that the refitted 25-year-old submarine had been sunk by hostile action.

The search for the Dakar, which means Shark in Hebrew, centered near the spot where Soviet warships have massed since the end of the June Mideast war.

An Israeli military spokesman said there was "no indication of hostile action."

There was no indication any Soviet vessels were in the area at the time, although a growing presence of Soviet ships has been reported in the Mediterranean in the past few months.

In Cairo, Egyptian authorities said they had no knowledge of the Dakar.

The Dakar was last heard from yesterday morning at a point 75 miles west of Cyprus. A British spokesman said the Dakar was on its way from the Island of Crete to Cyprus.

But radio Jerusalem said the 1,280-ton vessel was on its way from England to Israel and was 250 miles from the Israeli Coast when it was lost.

Constantine's Aide Charged By Junta

ATHENS (AP) — Maj. Michael Arnaoutis, a former aide of King Constantine, has been charged with desertion by a Greek military court prosecutor.

Arnaoutis, 40, private secretary and aide to the 27-year-old king, was reported to have quit his job after the unsuccessful royal countercoup last Dec. 13. His whereabouts were unknown here.

Swiss Avalanches Kill Four, Cut Rail

GENEVA (AP) — At least four persons were reported killed and ten others missing in avalanches thundering down the mountains of Switzerland last night and early today.

Dozens of slides, released by warm weather, rain and snow storms throughout central and eastern Switzerland, roared down the alpine slopes, cutting the main railway link from Switzerland to Italy, blocking local roads and railroads and isolating hamlets and villages.

North Korean Threat To Exterminate U.S.

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea declared itself fully combat ready today and promised an "an exterminatory blow" at the United States if the Communist nation is attacked.

A government statement issued at Pyongyang also said that the United Nations has no right to discuss the seizure of the USS Pueblo off Wonsan.

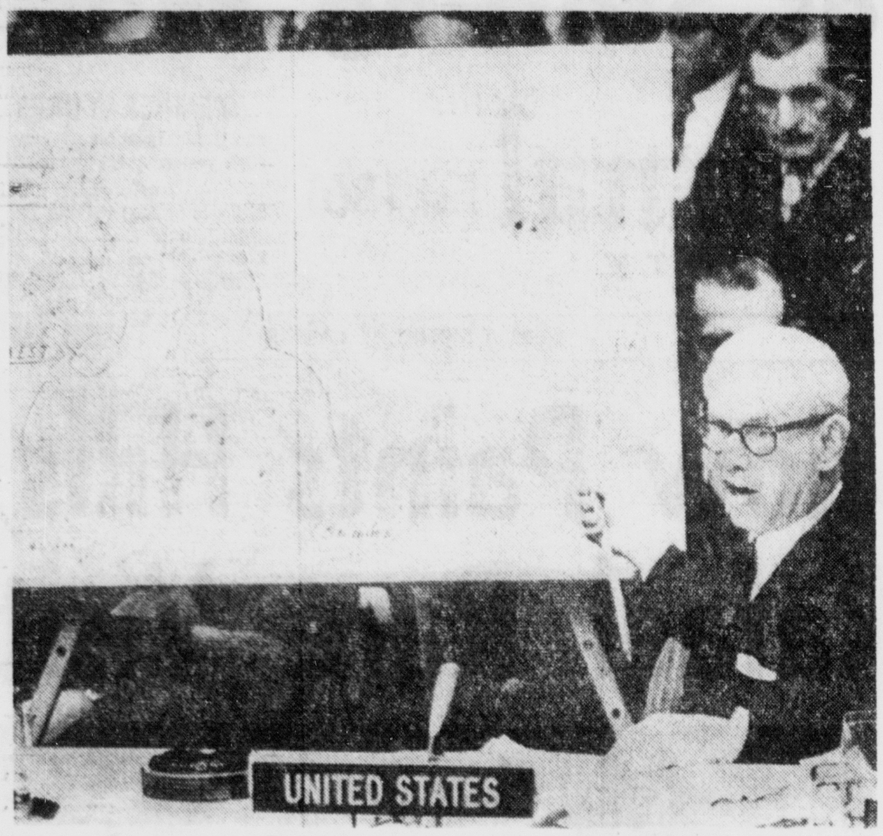
The statement charged that the United States is "now raising a frantic war clamor" by bringing the Pueblo incident to the United Nations and "mobilizing armed forces on a large scale."

"But," it said, "the U.S. imperialists, no matter how they act, can never conceal their ugly nature of aggressor, nor surprise the Korean people.

"The heroic Korean People's Army and the entire Koren people have got fully prepared for coping with any provocation or invasion by the U.S. imperialists and will deal an exterminatory blow at the enemies if they dare make an attack."

The statement was broadcast by Pyongyang's official Korean Central News Agency and monitored in Tokyo.

Turning to the debate in the U.N. Security Council, the statement said North Korea opposes the debate itself and will not recognize any resolution to be worked out there.



U.N. SEES PUEBLO'S COURSE

FBI Nabs 7 In Bomb, Bank Robberies Plot

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI)—Seven men arrested by the FBI in an alleged plot to dynamite a suburban city hall and power plant as a diversionary tactic while they robbed four banks have been arraigned on conspiracy charges.

They were arrested without a strugle yesterday as they gathered in the suburban communities of Bellevue and Lake City. An FBI spokesman said the men planned to move on the target city of Redmond, 20 miles northeast of Seattle.

The FBI said the alleged ringleader of the gang was Duane Ivan Carlson, 35. They said he was a paid fulltime employee of the Minutemen, an extreme anti-Communist organization.

The founder of the Minutemen said Carlson had been a member of the group but was dropped last year for nonpayment of dues.

FBI agents seized an arsenal of weapons which included nine sticks of dynamite, 10 Molotov cocktails, two .38 caliber revolvers, a 32 caliber automatic pistol, face masks and blasting caps.

Robert Sollitto, police chief of Redmond, said the FBI moved in and arrested the plotters "as they were grouping to put their plan into action."

Sollitto said the scheme called for blowing up the Redmond city hall, which houses the police station, and a nearby power substation diversionary tactic. He said the seven, under cover of the resulting confusion, planned then to rob the three banks in Redmond and one in the little town of Des Moines, about five miles south of Seattle.

Others arrested were Joseph D. Hourie, 20, an employee of a Seattle grocery chain; Ervin J. White, 41, of suburban Edmonds, a self-employed draftsman; Mervyn E. Henderson Sr., 57, of suburban Bothell, a church sexton and parttime maintenance man; Kelley E. Delano, Tacoma, a civilian driver at Ft. Lewis Army base; Milton J. Dix, 34, Seattle, a longshoreman; and Jerome N. Diemert, 43, Arlington, unemployed ship's oiler.

FBI director J. Edgar Hoover in Washington said the men identified each other under code numbers of "001" through "007." Double-o seven was the number the late author Ian Fleming gave his fictionalized superspy James Bond.

Eartha Kitt's Viet Journey Request Told

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Singer Eartha Kitt asked officials for permission to entertain U.S. troops in Vietnam only a few hours before she shocked a White House luncheon with an outburst against the fighting there.

Rep. Roman Pucinski, D-Ill., and Lt. Col. Roland C. Beasley, chief of the armed forces professional entertainment office, said yesterday Miss Kitt approached them Jan. 18, the same day she brought tears to the eyes of Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson at the luncheon.

Beasley said Miss Kitt failed to keep an appointment with him to discuss the request. He said he planned no further action on her request because "We never solicit entertainers for this type of thing."

In Hollywood a spokesman for Miss Kitt said she made the request because she thought the troops needed entertaining. She said it had nothing to do with politics or with the world situation.

The spokesman said Miss Kitt does not know whether she might renew her request to go to Vietnam.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Bay Fill Halted

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The City of Emeryville has been ordered to cease filling operations in a 144-acre site in San Francisco Bay until the California Supreme Court has considered a suit to stop the Bay fill permanently, the court ordered yesterday.

Emeryville has already begun fill operations in the area to make a residential site, an action opposed by the San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission.

The high court agreed Friday to hear the suit after Deputy Atty. Gen. Clement Shute presented the commission's arguments to halt the fill.

Barnard On Tour

MUNICH, Germany (UPI)—Dr. Christiaan Barnard arrived today to describe to West German surgeons details of the two heart transplants he has performed in South Africa.

He leaves Sunday for Rome and said he hoped for an audience with Pope Paul VI.

Heart Tests Due

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A spokesman for Commerce Secretary Alexander S. Trowbridge says the secretary is undergoing tests to determine whether there was any damage to his heart from chest pains which forced him to enter a hospital.

There was no definite word on how long Trowbridge, 38, would have to remain in the hospital. He suffered a heart attack 18 months ago and his doctor advised him to enter Washington Hospital Center after he became ill Wednesday.

Train Robbery Brains Deported

MONTREAL (UPI) — Charles Frederick Wilson, the brains behind Britain's 1963 Great Train robbery was scheduled to leave for Birmingham, England, today and a cell in that city's Winson Green jail from where he staged a daring escape in 1964.

Wilson

Wilson, his wife, Patricia, and their three children were ordered deported yesterday following hearings before immigration department examining officers.

Wilson and six other men were convicted in 1964 of stealing more than $7 million in bank notes from a mail train — the largest cash theft of all time.

The "Alloways," as the Wilsons called themselves until their arrest by a three-man police detachment Thursday morning, had led a discreet but prosperous life in a $40,000 mountainside home in Rigaud, Que., a picturesque French-Canadian village 40 miles from Montreal.

Pens Injunction

TOKYO (UPI)—A court issued an injunction Friday forbidding sales of a North Vietnamese fountain pen on the ground it violates an American trademark. The injunction had been asked by the Parker Pen Co. against Maruichi Bussan, which makes pens called Hon Ha (Red River) pens. The court said the North Vietnamese pens copied the Parker pens' clip.

Hussein Warns

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (UPI)—King Hussein of Jordan warned Friday that if Israel does not respond to U.N. resolutions on the Mideast deadlock, Arabs will take "drastic" steps.

Hussein, on a week's visit to Pakistan, said the security of the world would be at stake if Israel was allowed to "retain the fruits of her aggression."

Barrier Denounced

TOKYO (UPI)—The Hanoi newspaper Nhan Dan yesterday denounced the mechanical warning barrier under construction in Laos by the United States as a "most cynical violation of the 1962 Geneva agreement on Laos."

Black Panther Battles Charge As Mob Mills

OAKLAND (AP) — At request of the defense, Superior Court Judge Redmond Staats delayed ruling on a motion to quash a murder indictment of Black Panther Huey Newton.

A crowd of about 400 members of the Black Panthers, Peace and Freedom Party and other groups jammed first floor corridors of the Alameda County Courthouse where Newton's attorney was arguing the case yesterday. There was no violence, although officers moved to halt youths who tried to turn the courthouse flag upside down.

Newton is charged with the fatal shooting of Patrolman John Frey, 23, and the wounding of patrolman Herbert Heanes, 24, on an Oakland street last Oct. 28.

Judge Staats indicated he felt there was enough evidence to sustain the indictent but postponed final decision.

At the request of John Garry, Newton's attorney, Judge Staats issued subpoenas for Superior Court Judge Leonard Dieden, who presided over selection of the 1967 grand jury, and for Edward Schnarr, jury commissioner. They are to appear Feb. 1.

Garry contended that selection of the jury was unconstitutional because, he asserted, the method excluded members of low economic status.

Alioto Defends Antitrust Laws Against Critic

CHICAGO (UPI) — San Francisco Mayor Joseph L. Alioto said Thursday that the country's antitrust laws are not outdated.

Alioto, speaking before the midyear meeting of the Illinois State Bar Association, took issue with a recently published book by economist John Kenneth Galbraith, "New Industrial State."

In the book, Galbraith contends government and business have become so enmeshed antitrust laws are now outmoded.

Alioto, a former antitrust lawyer, said antitrust laws were still a necessity and added:

"I would have no overpowering desire to run a grocery store if and when repeal of the antitrust laws is accomplished."

Merger Gets Blame For News Strike

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Despite reports of negotiation progress, San Francisco's newspaper strike entered its 23rd day today amid claims a 1965 merger indirectly led to the news blackout.

The charge was voiced yesterday by U.S. Rep. Philip Burton, D-San Francisco, who said he will press for a Congressional investigation into the merger of the Chronicle and Examiner's advertising, circulation and printing departments.

Burton, saying he will continue to urge the Senate Antitrust Committee in Washington to reopen a hearing on the merger, claimed the transaction indirectly led to the present strike which has idled 3,000 workers since Jan. 5.

Although an immediate settlement appeared unlikely, some progress was reported yesterday in talks between Photoengravers Local 8 and the San Francisco Newspaper Printing Co., which prints both dailies.

Contract negotiations between the photoengravers and printing company began after two days of talks between Mailers Union Local 18 and the company ended Wednesday.

Russ Wilson, Photoengravers Union Secretary, said further negotiations are scheduled for Monday and Wednesday. No new bargaining sessions are planned for the Mailers, a union official said.

Reagan Loses Round On Ranch Valuation Fight

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The hearing into the valuation of a 56-acre piece of property in Malibu once owned by Gov. Ronald Reagan must continue, the county Assessment Appeals Board ruled yesterday.

The board denied a move by attorneys for the governor and the 20th Century-Fox studios, which purchased the property, to dismiss the hearing brought by Bryan Stevens, a San Marino schoolteacher.

Stevens has contended that the property was assessed at much less than its true value by county Assessor Philip E. Watson.

Watson last year valued the property for tax purposes at about $900,000, but the land was later sold to the studio for close to $2 million.

In asking for the dismissal, the attorneys claimed that the land was unimproved and therefore it was impossible to assess its true valuation.

However, James M. McMichael, vice president of the California Real Estate Association, testified that the property could be valued by comparing the land around it.

Such a comparison would have quadrupled the value of the property in question, he said.

About one-third of the hydroelectric potential of the U.S. is in the Columbia River Basin in the Northwest.

Watchdog Bureau, March Of Dimes Argue On Costs

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Officers of the local chapter of the March of Dimes have labeled as "factually incorrect" charges that 44 per cent of money collected was spent on administration.

The San Francisco Better Business Bureau also claimed yesterday the area March of Dimes campaign accumulated $137,400 in unspent receipts in receipts in recent years and deposited the money in local banks.

By one calculation, based on national and local statements, the bureau concluded the San Francisco Chapter of the National Foundation (official name of the March of Dimes) took in $129,300 in 1967 and spent 44 per cent of it on administration and fund raising.

The Marin chapter of the March of Dimes was quick yesterday to disassociate itself from charges of excessive costs levelled at the San Francisco chapter.

The Marin chapter raised $34,100 in 1967, and total costs were $4,659, or just over 7 per cent of the amount raised, reported Mrs. William A. Ullman of San Rafael, press representative for the local drive.

The Marin chapter has no paid employees, she said.

Of the $29,441 remaining after expenses, 25 per cent went to the national organization earmarked for research. The amount left over was split between Marin programs for local birth defect centers and national expenses, including the Salk Institute in Southern California.

The local drive's goal this year is $50,000.

"Although the (San Francisco) campaign has a Police Department permit which normally means fund raising expenses do not exceed 15 per cent of receipts," the bureau said, "it appears the reported income and expense totals do not coincide with the chapter's audited records."

The March of Dimes local chapter issued a statement saying the charge of high administration expenses made by the bureau was "factually incorrect." The statement said actual fund raising expenses have never exceeded 17 per cent of collections and local chapter administration expenses have always been considered separately.

There was no immediate comment regarding the accumulation of $137,400 in unspent receipts.

The March of Dimes is scheduled to begin its local fund raising drive in San Francisco Monday.

Reagan Cuts Reading Fund

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A member of the State Curriculum Commission reported yesterday that the Reagan administration plans to cut funds for the reading and literature program from $20 million to $11 million.

Dr. Kenneth Bailey said he had been told by Finance Director Gordon Smith that the $11 million figure was based on the reading program of six years ago.

Mrs. Elaine Stowe, Sacramento, chairman of the commission's reading committee, said the new program was designed to improve on the one adopted six years ago and that it would also apply to a greatly increased student population.

The commission started with approximately 3,000 suggested titles last June and cut them down to about 126 titles at its Nov. 15 meeting.

COMMUTERS MAY CARRY NO HARPOONS

Tiburon ferry commuters had a salty roll to their stride as they went ashore yesterday. They had witnessed a reminder of Moby Dick and Three Years Before the Mast.

"Thar she blows!" cried Capt. Ulysses Grant Johnson, commanding the ferry Harbor Queen, as a spout rose from the waves in the morning haze near Angel Island, about 400 feet off the bow.

It was a "little" gray whale "about the size of a Volkswagen bus," reported Captain Johnson. Whales up to 30 feet long have been spotted in the Bay before.

Gun Thefts Reported By Deputies

Thefts of two guns, a color television and a floor buffer were reported roday by sheriff's deputies.

One of the guns, a .22 caliber rifle with a telescopic sight, was among property worth about $1,000 reported stolen Thursday from the Marshall home of Dr. C. Attson O'Connor of Santa Rosa. His home was ransacked between Jan. 15 and Thursday, he reported.

Taken from his home while he was away fishing were the rifle, tape recorder, outboard motor, 12-foot rowboat, camping equipment, cameras and jewelry. A patio door was pried open, deputies said.

The other gun, a .45 caliber revolver, was taken Thursday night from Milt's Things Unlimited at 5941 Redwood Highway, Ignacio. A front window and display case were smashed to take the gun, deputies said.

printed in Peking and translated in Siamese." He said the propaganda apparently was the work of the Peking-directed Siamese Patriotic Front in Thailand.

Sihanouk warned that "most influential Cambodians" endorsed his recent improvement in relations with the United States and even urged him to erect a statue of Chester Bowles, who recently concluded a pact with him over the use of Cambodian territory as a Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troop sanctuary.

Sihanouk said if Communist raids continued, Cambodia will know "war and destruction" and probably will become a "fortified American base."

The Sausalito Citizens Council will not take part in the Sausalito-Vina Del Mar sister city program, the council decided Thursday.

The council agreed to notify the sister city committee that it is "not constituted to participate actively" in the program. The sister city committee recently asked all Sausalito organizations to seek volunteers in among their members to work for the program.

The council also decided to study whether to take a position on porposed legislation which would erase or expand the powers of the Golden Gate Bridge District.

The council spent most of the evening in informal discussion with Charles W. Whitehead, new city planning director.

Painters Win Dues Dispute With Union

Painters Local Union 83 of San Rafael is more than $4,800 better off as a result of a ruling passed down by the U. S. District Court.

District Judge Alfonzo J. Zirpoli ruled Thursday the Painters Union District Council was acting unlawfully in September 1966 in increasing the dues of East Bay locals membership.

Locals in Hayward, Richmond and Oakland bitterly fought the council's increase on the grounds such a raise required a membership vote which was never taken.

Their quarrel erupted into a private vendetta resulting in the murder of Dow Wilson, a union business agent, and Lloyd Green, an official in the Hayward local.

In the meantime, San Rafael and four other locals agreed to pay the higher fees until a court decision was made.

Franklin G. Gneri, business agent of Local 83, said yesterday the additional dues paid by the San Rafael local amounted to about $4,800 since September 1966.

Locals which paid the increase can seek either a refund from the district council or credit against further dues.

Gneri said Local 83's future action will be discussed at the next meeting, scheduled for Feb. 12 at 8 p.m. at the union office at Mission and Tamalpais Avenues.

Judge Zirpoli ruled that the district council be prohibited from collecting the dues increase and enjoined the council from disciplining the locals.

Prison Art Show Nod Sought For Civic Center

San Quentin Prison inmate art will be displayed and sold in the Marin County Civic Center in May, if the board of supervisors permits use of the building.

The request for permission will be made to the supervisors Tuesday by the Marin Mental Health Foundation.

"We have been granted the privilege of showing and selling San Quentin art off the prison grounds," wrote Lloyd Tunik, president of the foundation. "We are required by law to hold the activity on public property and we can think of no better place (public or private) for the function than the Civic Center."

The foundation wants to use the exhibit area outside the supervisors' chambers from May 2 through 5, and conduct the sale on May 4 and 5.

proposal to provide long-term insurance for district employees who become totally and permanently disabled. The district's attorney, Jerome B. White, was asked to rule if it would be legal for the district to pay part of such coverage.

Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District directors also:

PEAK HOURS — Rejected suggestions to accept commute tickets during peak commute hours only if two or more persons were in a vehicle because "it would take too much time to count passengers."

COMMUTE BOOKS — Rejected a proposal to sell commute ticket books by mail, on the ground it would be "impractical from an administrative point of view."

SECOND DECK — Received report from engineers Ammann and Whitney that their design and cost study of a second deck was 83.7 per cent completed.

COMPUTER — Leased an International Business Machines computer at $3,274 a year to record tolls, figure payrolls and do some accounting. It replaces a 30-year-old toll-counting system which district staff said costs $60,000 a year to operate.

LIABILITY — Referred to White for review a proposal by Marsh and McLennan Inc., San Francisco insurance brokers, for $5 million personal injury and property damage liability insurance at a three-year premium of $4,000.

MISUSE — Received insurance committee report that it is considering liability insurance coverage for directors and officers to cover criminal liability, alleged errors in judgment and misuse of public money.

FREE TOLLS — Rejected a proposal that toll-free passage be provided dependents of military personnel. White advising the district had no authority to grant free passage.

STATUE — Rejected a proposal by Leonoudakis to build a $10,000 pedestal for a statue of Capt. Juan Bautiste de Anza, founder of San Francisco. White said the expenditure would be illegal.

POLL — Received report from Gen. Mgr. James Adam that he is getting cost estimates on having a poll of bridge users on solutions to congestion.

AGENDA — Voted 12-2 to start sending the press, public bodies and interested organizations advance agenda of committee meetings, directors L. E. Castner of Sonoma County and Fraser objecting to the proposal by Hardcastle.

LEGISLATION — Referred to White for review bills before the legislature that either would dissolve the district or broaden its power to other forms of transit, including ferries.

DEATH CLAIM — Referred to White a $20,000 claim with the State Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board by Mrs. Lillian Patrick for the death of her husband, Lee, a bridge painter killed in a fall from the bridge on Oct. 25.

STATE LOAN — Received report from finance committee chairman that state finance director Gordon P. Smith is trying to work out repayment of a $5 million state loan to the district so that the district will not lose interest on the loan, due to be repaid in 1971.

GREYHOUND FARES — Agreed to comply with a request by Marin County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney that bridge district staff help Marin Transit District prepare a rebuttal to Greyhoud Lines' application for a 50-per-cent fare hike.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY — Referred to the joint employment and conciliation and rules and policy committee a proposal by Leonoudakis that the district contract only with firms that guarantee they are equal opportunity employers.

TELEVISION — Authorized district engineer Robert E. Shields to study installation of a closed circuit television camera on the San Francisco approach, the cost estimated at up to $50,000.

BIDS — Awarded contracts to the following low bidders: W. P. Fuller and Co., $2,785 for 500 gallons of red primer paint; S and C Motors of San Francisco, $2,625 for a one-half ton pickup truck; Lampson and Sons of Geyserville, $2,734 for a 1968 Ford sedan, and Marsh and McLennan, $1,550 for comprehensive automobile bodily injury and property damage liability insurance. An $8,900 bid by Adams and Smith of Richmond for 1,550 steel floor beam stiffeners was referred for review to Shields, who had estimated the cost at $25,000.

Model Jean Shrimpton Works In Both Films And Fashion

By MARGARET GWATHMEY

Jean Shrimpton, the world's top model, is a leggy, friendly London girl with a quiet voice. In San Francisco this week, she has seen a great deal of the Bay Area largely without being recognized. Several things contribute to this. Her honey blonde hair falls loosely down her cheeks and shoulders, hiding most of her face. Yesterday morning she was wearing a simple blue and green knit minidress, clumpy heeled black shoes, white hose and a total of seven rings, two each on her right little and ring fingers and three in a row on her left ring finger, and no other jewelry.

She stands quite still and is calm amidst confusion. Her naturalness shows in her perference for carrying on a conversation rather than being the center of attention in a group.

AMERICAN AND English buyers shouldn't attend the French fashion collection showings, she says. "I agree with the boycott and certainly won't go to Paris. I won't buy anything French," she said in an interview yesterday.

But Miss Shrimpton doesn't have a favorite designer. Those closest to her now say she doesn't like modeling, but she does like the benefits of being a model. She herself says of the clothes she is asked to model, "I never take much notice."

Her toughest modeling assignment was spending five evening hours outside at Versailles in February in spring clothes. She says it wasn't much fun spending an hour on the Brooklyn Bridge in February in spring clothes, either. "I wouldn't stand for it today. That was four or five years ago."

"THE SHRIMP" has made her film debut in "Privilege," an English film which is being shown in the States.

"I had been approached before for film parts," she says. "The trouble was, they were all straight glamor roles, playing models. I thought if I tried any acting it shouldn't just be a repetition of what I've done every day as a fashion model."

"The part I did in 'Privilege' is something completely different. It's a dramatic role and I'm not playing a model. It's about the false world of teen-age idolatry of pop singers."

JEAN CHANGED for the afternoon yesterday into a black wool minidress tied with a scarf, with matching coat, topped with a floppy-brimmed blue hat. She is traveling with Valerie Wade, fashion editor of the London Observer.

Far more Carnaby Street than Miss Shrimpton, Miss Wade was wearing a brown leather jerkin which reached to her hips, over a long sleeved yellow blouse tied with a wide man's tie. A pleated brown miniskirt with a two inch leather belt, brown hose and shoes completed her costume. Both girls are five feet eight inches tall.

The Shrimp is touring America to introduce a line of natural look cosmetics made for her by a British firm. Tied in with this were today's Shrimpedelic Happenings at the downtown Emporium, complete with light works, rock combo, and films, after which Jean gave out autographed pictures and talked with her fans.

MISS SHRIMPTON is leaving the Bay Area tonight for New York City. Her current boy friend, who is not Terence Stamp, lives there. But she says, "I really don't want to talk about anything to do with him."

Before entering the fashion world, she attended a secretarial college in London. She now lives in a mews house in the center of London, but visits her parents on their farm 35 miles away on weekends, where she loves to ride horses. Her sister, Chrissie, is 22 and also a model.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

DEAR HELEN:

My mother is making me paranoid. I never know what wild "get-even" thing she'll think of next.

Here's an example — not the worst. Dinner was late and I had to catch my ride to the library or walk a mile in the dark. My dad said it was all right to leave the dishes for later, but my mother didn't know because she'd gotten mad half way through eating and walked out.

Everyone was in bed when I came home. The kichen looked clean and I thought Dad had come to my rescue. I knew my mother wouldn't have touched it. I undressed quickly using only the night light.

Then I jumped into bed — on top of all those dirty dishes, knives included. She'd put them under the covers. Naturally, I got some cuts and bruises, but they didn't hurt like my mind hurts, knowing I can expect these "surprises" if I make the tiniest slip, especially if my dad stands up for me.

He gave me a parakeet for Christmas, and I forgot to clean out the cage just one day. She turned the bird loose; said it served me right for being sloppy. I found his feathers. The cat got him.

Once she tore a strip out of my only formal and gave it to me for a dust cloth.

I try to keep everything up because I'm scared to death of those punishments. But I'm so nervous I forget, and then they come. I work part time and am trying to keep a B average so I can go to college, besides doing much of the housework.

Dad says be patient. Tell me how. — READY TO SCREAM

DEAR READY:

The sickness you describe can't be cured with patience alone. Your mother needs psychiatric treatment and if your father doesn't get it for her, then he stands responsible her blighting three lives: yours, hers and his.

Call the mental health association in your city and you will be referred to the counseling you all need.—H

DEAR HELEN:

I thought I was the only girl who was like "Not the Marrying King — Yet." It seems that my girl friends' whole world revolves around boys, and weddings, though they don't seem to think much past that walk down the aisle.

Well, I have to admit, I can't live without boys either, what girl can? But I'm not about to marry one of them until I've lived, lived, lived! I'm gonna see what's on the other side of the hill before I make my nest, and I'm not gonna cry like one girl I know, who still mourns the loss of a boy she dated two years ago. When I find the right man, he'll know it, and then, when I'm about 26, I'll settle down and be a walking baby factory. I want at least eight kids — and my marriage will last forever. — SOPHOMORE

DEAR SOPHOMORE:

Write to me when you're 26 and we'll see how close you've come to making it, that is, if Helen Help Us is still making it then. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

You're so right about boys being the romantic sex but getting over it faster. I met this fellow at a dance. He was leaving for the Army next day. He said I was the girl he'd been waiting for all his life and he'd write every day. His first letter asked for my picture; his second asked for my measurements (I answered, "Let's settle for 20-20 — vision," as you once suggested). His third asked me to marry him. I said, "Not ready."

Then came his fourth: "Dear Mary, We'll always be friends, but you see, I've met this wonderful, gorgeous girl and it's really REAL . . . I know you'll understand." Thank goodness I never took thim seriously. I hope his new girl doesn't, or she'll be hurt. A girl should believe what a boy says only after she's known him a year, and then only about half. — ME

DEAR ME:

Aren't you being a little too suspicious? But I'll give you points for knowing how to read between his line. All girls should learn this early. — H.

Courreges Unveils Collection— A New Heyday For Burley-Cue

By JOAN DEPPA

PARIS (UPI)--Andres Courreges took it off today—almost all off.

For the not so innocent little girls of the swinging 60s the designer unveiled an evening dress that was topless except for two tiny yellow flowers. The strippers call them pasties.

The mood was set by a rangy Negro male dancer who came in with the press corps clad in a discreet black trench coat. He stripped suddenly and unexpectedly to a pair of white Courreges beach shorts and began dancing violently to blaring tribal rock rhythms and jazz.

From there on it was a mixture of the little girls and sheer sex appeal. It was very much like what Minsky's must have been in the heyday of burley-cue.

Sometimes the little girl look and sheer sex appeal were combined—as in the saucy bikini dresses which were transparent except for the places where bikinis normally are worn.

He also came up with a line of little bosom-revealing bras sometimes held together at the front with only a tiny two-petal flower—the signature of his Spring 1968 collection.

Often the models stripped from the classic little Courreges coats, which might have been worn by the Duchess of Windsor, to an evening bikini that not even the most daring starlet would dare to wear in public.

Courreges has been drifting gently towards a more feminine version of his original hard geometric lines and should be able to offer a successful compromise that could stand up to the new romanticism sweeping the collections.

But Cardin appears to be sticking to his hardwear and has even vowed to take fashion into the electronic age with a dress of 200 lights.

He has already unveiled a collection of jewelry featuring diamonds in the rough mounted on abstract designs of steel, silver and gold.

The diamonds look like a hunk of lava and may have an inverted snob appeal. Like mink underwear, only the owner knows she's got it.

DRAMA REVIEW

'Slow Dance' Far From Slow; It's Gripping Modern Drama

By JAMES E. WILLIAMS

Festival Theater of San Anselmo has distinguished itself again in its current production of William Hanley's "Slow Dance on the Killing Ground."

Last night opened the second weekend of the contemporary drama, which explores man's struggle to deal with his own "killing ground."

Locked within the souls of the play's three characters are dark secrets, hatreds and indifferences just as hellish as any to be found "out there" in the jungle of the street. The sanctuary in which their ballet of life is performed is a little soda shop.

COOL, SMART CAT

Introduction to the savage entanglement is made by Randall, who flees into the shop from what he calls "the killing ground out there." Danny Duncan is an excellent selection for Randall. His shield from reality — a cool cat costume and mocking Uncle Tom dialect — is most convincing even though his action is a little too busy at first in his attempt to crack the barrier of Glas, the shop owner. Without his mask, he is a scared, lost individual with an IQ of 187.

In contrast to Randall, Glas, performed by Robert Adler, is low key. His soft German accent is near perfect and like the other two, he carries his secret of guilt deep within his soul.

As in a ballet, Act One is the pas de deux. But the little game between Glas and Randall is suddenly broken in Act Two, the pas de trois by Rosie. She stumbles into the shop, lost in her search for an appointment with an abortionist.

EMBITTERED GIRL

Rosie is a 19-year-old girl of her time. A plain Jane, she has tasted the bitter pill of love and wants to rid herself of it. Marjorie Casebier is by no means 19, but it makes no difference. She is an actress of immense depth, able to carry off the difficult role with a minimum amount of flaws.

To keep the play from being too somber, Hanley has inserted a certain amount of biting humor, which is eventually channeled back into the mainstream of the play. As he says, "we live in a moral deformity and who is to save us but ourselves."

Director Dorothy Adler has done an excellent job with the cast. Each has a deep understanding of his part. The emotional drain is very visable.

Paul Ellsworth's set lends itself greatly to the action. It is a perfect confessional for the emotional drain is very visible. playwright has labeled the coda — in this case the finality to life.

This is the second production of the play in Marin during the past six weeks. The West Coast premiere was presented recently by the Homestead Players at Brown's Hall in Mill Valley. Comparison of the two is impossible since this reviewer did not catch the first run.

"Slow Dance" will be presented again at 8:30 p.m. today at the Barn, on the San Francisco Theological Seminary campus in San Anselmo and also tomorrow at 7 p.m. The play runs Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays through Feb. 24.

SYMPHONY REVIEW

Pianist Claudio Arrau Electrifying Soloist

Claudio Arrau, world famous 64-year-old Chilean born pianist, proved that he is continuing at the peak of his artistry in an electrifying performance last night with the San Francisco Symphony at the Opera House.

Josef Krips' beautifully coordinated conducting of the orchestra in the Brahms Concerto No. 2 in B Flat Major with Arrau's solo performance resulted in an exquisitely balanced reading, both in fortissimo and pianissimo passages.

It was a reading also characterized by strongly marked rhythms of utmost virility as well as gossamer delicacy, especially in the appassionato movement.

Enchanting, too, was the famous andante with its song of the cellos and violas in which the piano was at times almost an obbligato — a real test of a top artist's control for the sake of the over-all conception. The finale was a miracle of buoyancy and gaiety.

It will be interesting to compare this reading with that of the same work to be performed by Istvan Nadas and the Marin Symphony Orchestra on Feb. 11 at the College of Marin gymnasium.

The second number on the program, Richard Strauss's tone poem "Don Juan," was performed with fiery brilliance and verve admirably evocative of the famous romantic figure.

A rich orchestral palate, from lustrous brass to shimmering violins and harp, expressed a wide range of emotional nuances, a high point being an entrancing melody like a song of unsatisfied longing. It was reminiscent of the surge of the love death music in Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde."

Krips is unquestionably a master of the Strauss style embodied in this work.

In great contrast to the other two numbers was the Symphony No. 92 in G Major (Oxford) of Haydn, which opened the concert. Using mostly strings, it was the very essence of Haydn joyousness, refinement and grace.

There were some lovely flute passages in the adagio, and the feathery light presto in the finale sparkled like sunlight on ripples.

Yes, the orchestra showed in this second program of its 56th season that it is off to a good start after a long delay.

Narcotics Sentence Includes Job Order

Brian Leslie Berry, 19, of no fixed address, who pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court to being in a place where narcotics were used, was placed on two years probation yesterday and told to get a job.

Judge Peter Allen Smith made employment a condition of probation for the youth.

Aviation Board To Elect Leader, Meet Member

A new chiarman, to succeed Joseph W. Wright of Novato, will be chosen by the Marin Aviation Commission Wednesday night.

The commission will meet at 8 p.m. in the board of supervisors' chambers at the Civic Center.

Ray W. Foreaker Jr. of San Rafael, appointed by the supervisors to succeed Wright on the commission, will be introduced at the meeting.

The six other holdover members of the commission are D. M. Christensen of San Rafael, Tris Coffin of Mill Valley, Melville Dickson of Woodacre, Richard Nave of Ignacio, Ben R. Ostlind of San Rafael, and David B. Vail of Mill Valley.

Airport Manager Francis E. Torr will introduce the new airport attendant, Willard Dale Reed of Fairfax. Torr will also report on the progress made thus far at the expanded county airport in Novato.

Police Halted In Crackdown On 'The Beard'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Attorneys representing the producers of the controversial play "The Beard" have apparently obtained a court order which tentatively restricts police from further hampering the play's performance.

Last night's second performance was staged in its entirety with stand-ins playing the only two characters.

Richard Bright, 30, and Alexandra Hay, 20 who play "Billy the Kid" and "Harlow" in the production were booked and bailed out along with producer Robert Barrows, 42, and director Robert Gist, 49, for the second straight day, after last night's first performance.

The four were arrested and booked along with author Michael McClure Thursday night on the same charges.

But yesterday's second performance of the play, which culminates with a simulated sex act, was allowed to go on without interference.

It was not immediately determined who had obtained the injunction to allow the play to continue.

LIKES FORMAL WAYS

Academy's Factotum Ends 25 Year Career

By JOHN F. KEARNEY

Mrs. Romona Weaver, 72, cashier, bookkeeper and business factotum at San Rafael Military Academy, regrets very much the passing of the old days.

She retires on Thursday after 25 years behind her desk and will leave happy in the knowledge that, perhaps, after all, some of the old spirit is staging a comeback.

"When I first came to the academy, everything was formal," she said. "The meals were formal, the cadets wore formal uniform."

With ill-concealed pleasure, she added: "I think they're going to bring all that back and I'm very glad about that . . . yes, indeed."

LAUDS DISCIPLINE

She considered discipline an essential ingredient in the life of a youngster at the academy, or at any school for that matter.

"There are rules which have to be kept," she said. "The trouble today is that many parents make the rules but don't follow through."

Almost every Friday afternoon, she is in the academy's business office when the cadets come in for their weekly travel allowance.

SOME ARGUE

"Sometimes you might get one who argues over a mild infraction of a rule," she said. "I listen to him and then get my oar in and say 'No.' "

She smiled. "It's a funny thing but the ones I think I have been the meanest to are always the cadets that come back to see me years afterwards on alumni days," she said.

Mrs. Weaver has had her own experience at bringing up children. She has two daughters, Mrs. Harvey Teague of Novato and Mrs. Don Ross, who lives near Sonoma. She also has four grandchildren, three girls and a boy.

LAWMAN IN-LAW

Her son-in-law, Harvey Teague, is inspector in charge of the juvenile division at Marin County Sheriff's Office.

"He has to be hard on the kids sometimes," she said, "but in the end I think they appreciate it."

She was five when she came to Marin County from her native Missouri and attended the old San Pedro School and San Rafael High School.

In those days, the academy was called the Mount Tamalpais Military Academy and cavalry horses and drawn gun carriages were the big thing.

Mrs. Weaver recalls attending some of the early academy dances and watching special parades through the streets.

'STAY A YEAR'

She was hired by the first superintendent of the San Rafael Military Academy, A. L. Stewart, in 1943.

"I thought I would stay here perhaps a year, but I ended up by staying 25," she said.

Once she retires, Mrs. Weaver said she would spend her time doing the things she most likes to do, sewing, knitting and dressing dolls as a hobby.

She may also take the opportunity to sample more of that home life she often likes to talk about. "Family provides a firm foundation to every life," she said.

RETIRING — Mrs. Romona Weaver of San Rafael will tidy up her cashier's desk at San Rafael Military Academy for the last time this week when she retires after 25 years in the post. She has lived in Marin almost all her 72 years. (Independent-Journal photo)

A former operator of photographic studios in San Rafael and Santa Rosa was fined $60 in Sonoma County Municipal Court yesterday for failing to appear before a deputy state labor commissioner.

Ronald G. Lopez, 31, of Oakland, pleaded guilty last month to a charge of ignoring a subpeona to appear at a hearing in the Marin County Civic Center on wage complaints brought by employees.

Sonoma Municipal Court Judge Alexander F. Scheidecker ordered Lopez to appear before him for new sentencing Tuesday if the fine is not paid.

Lopez and Philip G. Williams, 40, of Sacramento, ran Pacific Studios, whose offices in San Rafael and Santa Rosa are closed.

Williams is scheduled for jury trial in Sonoma County Tuesday on charges of issuing bad checks to employees and selling portraits over the telephone using misleading information.

Buoy Asked For Bolinas Bay Safety

A navigational marker will be placed in Bolinas Bay to help sailors enter Bolinas Lagoon in fog or darkness, the Bolinas Harbor District board decided Thursday night.

The board will apply to the Army Corps of Engineers and the Coast Guard for specifications and placement of a buoy to be put in the bay.

Most likely arrangement, district consultant Norman T. Gilroy said, will be a lighted bell buoy placed so boats can set course from Duxbury light to the buoy, then turn and set course for the light at the channel entrance. The buoy will probably be installed this spring, Gilroy said.

The board agreed to let the present lease lapse on a wildlife refuge in the northern part of the lagoon, pending completion of the ecological study by Joel Gustafson of Mill Valley.

Gustafson's study report will be available this weekend, the board was told.

The Bolinas Harbor District board also:

OFFICERS — Re-elected the 1967 officers to 1968 terms. Gene W. McDaniel is president; Thomas R. Tawna, Vice President, Archie A. Goldsberry, Secretary, and Mrs. Harriet Greene, Treasurer.

EROSION — Ordered a letter sent to Rep. Don A. Clausen-R First District, asking him to try speeding up funding of a Corps of Engineers' study of cliff erosion at Bolinas. The letter notified Clausen of a recent large slide below Overlook Drive.

STUDY — Learned an oceanological study is to be completed in two weeks.

INFORMATION — Announced plans to set up public information displays in the district office nearing completion on Main Street, Bolinas, and in Stinson Beach. The displays will provide information on the various lagoon studies as they are completed. The Stinson Beach bulletin board will be put in Tawns' Seashore Realty office for the time being.

BOUNDARIES — Agreed to work with James Albright, owner of extensive tideland property adjoining the district lands, to negotiate boundary lines and resolve deed problems stemming from land documents going back to the 1870s.

Only the U.S. Senate has the power to approve or disapprove major Presidential appointments.

CHILDREN, PARENTS GET SURVEY STAKE WARNING

County officials yesterday appealed to youngsters and their parents not to tamper with survey stakes along Corte Madera Creek between Bon Air Bridge and College Avenue in Kentfield.

"Somebody has been pulling out the stakes, and we have to do the work all over again," complained Eraldo (Al) Zaro, county surveyor, who is staking out construction easements and rights-of-way for the U. S. Corps of Engineers' flood control project.

The stakes, about two and one-half feet long, are driven into the ground and marked with blue, red or white flags. "It's a misdemeanor to destroy survey points, said Zaro. It "means loss of money and also loss of timing, which is very important," said Mogens Ring, county flood control engineer.

Storms Adding To Quake Misery

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — Rain, snow, wind and two more tremors worsened the misery today of western Sicily, hit by a powerful new shock yesterday after a massive earthquake Jan. 15.

Officials reported that the toll from the new shock now stood at nine dead and 87 injured.

This added to the hundreds killed and injured in the disastrous quake that left a dozen communities in ruins 10 days earlier.

Police reported that Mafia elements were buying the surviving livestock of depressed refugees at ruinously low prices.

Jaycees Win Rec Program Recognition

The San Rafael Junior Chamber of Commerce and Charles L. Tacchi, chairman of the city's park and recreation commission, are winners of outstanding service awards of District I of the California Parks and Recreation Society.

District I is bordered by San Francisco Bay, the Oregon boundary and the Fairfield-Vacaville area on the east.

The chamber sponsored a baseball team, swimming and track meets, a basketball tournament and an Easter egg hunt during 1967. A total of about 1,000 young persons were involved.

Tacchi, commission chairman for four years, was recognized as a result of the opening of two new parks in the city and development of a recreation program for all ages.

Andrew J. Snyder, director of parks and recreation for San Rafael, will present the awards at the society's annual banquet Feb. 3 at the Los Robles Lodge in Santa Rosa.

State Approval Not Yet In On Tomales Plan

The state Division of Architecture has not yet approved the building plans for the new Tomales High School, Supt. Anthony Matulich told the Tomales High School District trustees Thursday night.

Matulich also reported that no new work had been done on the new school since the last rains, about three weeks ago.

He also reported that negotiations were going to acquire a water tank site.

The Tomales High School District trustees also:

DRIVER — Hired Arthur Curme as part time driving training instructor at $5 per hour.

UNIFICATION — Heard a report from Trustee Roy A. Parks that the unification of the Tomales High School District and the elementary districts composing it would come before the State Board of Education on Feb. 8. The board named Parks to represent it at the meeting.

AUDIT — Accepted the annual audit from Deaton and Roberts, auditors of Petaluma.

GAME — Approved the use of school facilities for Feb. 5 for a varsity vs. faculty basketball game with the proceeds to go to the Easter Seal campaign.

Contrasting Viet Views Talks Slated

Two educators, who were in South Vietnam last year, will present contrasting viewpoints on the effect of the war when the Mill Valley Forum meets at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the city council chamber.

The topic of the meeting, one of a series on Vietnam, is "Vietnam: the effect of the War on its People — Democracy or Catastrophe?"

The speakers will be William A. Nighswonger, political science professor at Sonoma State College, and Orville Schell, a fellow in the Center for Chinese Studies at the University of California, Berkeley.

Nighswonger was a civilian aid representative in Da Nang for two years and is a former consultant on Vietnam to the Agency for International Development. He is author of "Rural Pacification in Vietnam."

Schell, co-author of the "The China Reader," has been in Vietnam four times as an observer and correspondent.

William Gavin, Mill Valley businessman, will be moderator. Question and discussion periods will follow the speakers' presentations.

Synanon Resident Denies Morals Counts

Robert Claude Tacronte, 29, of Synanon, pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court yesterday to charges of statutory rape and assault with intent to commit rape on a 12-year-old San Rafael girl.

Preliminary hearing on the charges, which stem from offenses which allegedly occurred Aug. 21, 1966, was set for Wednesday.

Symbols for Stars in Order Of Brightness

FEBRUARY IN THE HEAVENS

Month Shows Calendar Confusion

By SCIENCE SERVICE

Only one naked eye planet is visible during February evenings. Shining in the eastern sky is brilliant Jupiter, which joins the bright stars that are so prominent at this time of year.

However, if you look to the west in the early evening, you may see three other planets. Saturn, low in the west as the sky darkens, is considerably fainter than Jupiter although equal to a star of the first magnitude. It sets about four hours after the sun.

Mars, distinctly red, is below Saturn and a little fainter. It sets about an hour earlier.

During the first few days of February you may also get a glimpse of Mercury. Low in the southwest just after sundown, it sets about an hour later—before the sky is completely dark. Rapidly moving westward, Mercury will be in the same direction as the sun by mid-month.

The accompanying maps, which do not show Saturn, Mars or Mercury, depict the skies as they look about 10 p.m., local time, at the beginning of February. They appear similarly at 9 p.m. around the 15th and about 8 p.m. on the 29th.

Easily recognized in the south is Orion, the warrior, generally considered the finest constellation in the sky. It has two stars of the first magnitude: Betelguese above, and Rigel below. Between them is the row of three fainter stars that supposedly form the warrior's belt. Above the western end of the belt is Bellatrix.

Orion is surrounded by five more bright stars, i.e., stars of the first magnitude. Lower and toward the left stands Canis Major, the larger dog, with Sirius, the brightest star we can see in the nighttime sky. Above it is the smaller dog, Canis Minor. Procyon is its brightest star. Still higher are the twins, Gemini, in which Pollux shines.

Farther west is Auriga, the charioteer. Nearly overhead, toward the southwestern horizon, is Taurus, the bull. Ruddy Aldebaran marks his eye.

No other part of the sky contains as many bright stars in one area as this. That is why the winter evening skies are so brilliant.

In addition, an eighth bright star shines in the east. This is Regulus, in Leo, the lion. It is just above Jupiter, and a good deal fainter.

Toward the northeast is the familiar Big Dipper, part of Ursa Major, the great bear. Cassiopeia, the queen, appears in the northwest, as a "W" on its side. Between these groups stands Ursa Minor, the little bear, with Polaris, the pole star.

This year February brings us the rarest of all dates: Feb. 29. For 1968 is a leap year, with the extra day that Julius Caesar introduced in 46 B.C. to help the calendar stay in step with the seasons.

To keep track of time, we have two principal natural periods. One is the day — the time it takes the earth to turn once on its axis. The other is the year. This is the time the earth requires for one revolution around the sun.

There is also the month, originally the time for the moon to go through its complete cycle of phases. This is 29 days 12 hours 44 minutes and 3 seconds.

Unfortunately, these three periods do not fit evenly together, and that fact has been mainly responsible for the difficulties men have encountered in devising a workable calendar.

Before Caesar's time, the Roman calendar had 12 months. Originally they kept in step with the phases of the moon, like the Jewish calendar. But the year, 365 days, 5 hours 48 minutes and 46 seconds long, contains about 12.4 lunar months. Therefore, in order to keep the correct relations to the seasons, the Romans inserted, when necessary, an extra month between February and March. When they did this, five days were omitted from the end of February.

This sounds quite complicated —and it was. The College of Pontiffs, responsible for regulation of the calendar, sometimes used their power dishonestly and manipulated it for their own personal or political interests.

Thus they allowed the months to drift from their proper seasons. By 47 B.C., January was coming in the autumn instead of winter.

On the advice of an astronomer named Sosigenes, Caesar made a drastic reform. He decreed that the year we know as 46 B.C. should have three extra months: 445 days in all. Quite appropriately, this was called the Year of Confusion.

Told that the length of the year was 365¼ days, he made ordinary years 365 days long. Every fourth year had 366 days: this took care of the four extra quarters when they had accumulated to a full day.

He divided the year into the twelve months we use today, and ignored completely the phases of the moon. February was to have 28 days except in leap year when the extra day was inserted as Feb. 29. Essentially, this is the calendar we use today, but with some further changes that Pope Gregory XIII made in 1582.

Actually, 365¼ days is 11 minutes 14 seconds longer than the average year length. This is a small error, but it caused the seasons to drift gradually backward in the calendar by one day every 128 years. Easter, and other religious festivals, were beginning to come at the wrong time of year.

The papel bull setting up the Gregorian calendar, the one we use today, ordained that the day after Oct. 4, 1582, would be Oct. 15 instead of Oct. 5. This brought the vernal equinox, the beginning of spring, back to March 21. That was its date in 325 A.D. when the Council of Nicaea set the rules for determining the date of Easter.

To keep the calendar in step with the seasons, the Pope decreed that three leap years would be dropped every 400 years. Every year divisible by four is a leap year, unless it ends a century (like 1800 or 1900). Then it is a leap year only if divisable by 400. Thus, 2000 will be leap year, like 1600, but unlike 1700, 1800 and 1900.

This shortened the mean length of the year by only 10 minutes 48 seconds, which still leaves an error of 26 seconds. But no one seems very worried about that. Not until about the year 4900 A.D. will the accumulation amount to as much as a day.

DRAMA CONFERENCE

Critics Don't Agree On Campus Coverage

By KARL BARRON

Three panelists, all professional critics, failed to agree on the role of the critic in educational theater at yesterday's session of the Northwest Drama Conference, now in its final day at the College of Marin.

"Critic's Choice — The Critic's Role in Educational Theater" was the topic of the panel, moderated by this reporter. On the basic question of whether the critics of commercial newspapers should even review college productions, Stanley Eichelbaum of the San Francisco Examiner felt they should not; Gerald Nachman of the Oakland Tribune felt they should; and Edgar Reynolds of the Daily Californian said that special circumstances, such as new plays or important guest directors should determine whether general critics cover a show.

STUDENTS MATURE

All three, and members of the audience, seemed in agreement that young actors of college age are mature enough to withstand either praise or adverse criticism without having their egos damaged, although Eichelbaum said "It's cruel to evaluate students."

Reynolds, as critic of a college paper, was the first to admit that "the majority of college productions are more fun to be in than to see." In reviewing, he said the critic should emphasize "the positive aspects rather than the failures." Under questioning he admitted that this could lead to a loss of faith in the critic from his readers.

Nachman stated "you have to adjust your standards for a college production," drawing immediate fire from the Examiner critic, who said "I can't have different standards. No matter who is doing it, I demand good theater."

INCOMPETENTS HIT

Questions from the audience of some 100 persons brought complaints on incompetent critics in smaller communities; i.e. newspapers which send a sports reporter on his night off to cover the play. This led Reynolds to point out that educators should consider training students to be critics.

All panelists agreed that College of Marin rates highly in the Bay Area for its drama production and teaching excellence.

In the panel which followed — "The Professional on Campus — for Good or Evil," educators from four colleges with professional programs aired their experiences to date. They were Evaline Uhl Wright, head of the Dept. of Dramatic Art, Mill College; Alfred Rossi, UC at Davis; Robert Loper, University of Washington; and Faber DeChine, University of Oregon. Moderator was Gregory Falls, University of Washington.

All seemed in agreement that their attempts to use professional actors as both production and teaching aids were successful when they were able to obtain professionals with the ability to communicate the facets of their craft to the student.

RECRUITING PROBLEM

And all agreed that the big problem in this regard is finding suitable professionals without having previous knowledge of their ability in this particular field.

Those attending the conference last night saw College of Marin's "Caucasian Chalk Circle," followed by a discussion of Brechtian production problems, moderated by James C. Dunn, chairman of the COM Drama Department and of the conference.

NEWSPAPER PICKETS MOCK YORTY

An effigy of Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty hangs from a utility pole above pickets milling in front of the strikebound Herald-Examiner. A crowd of about 1,000 persons became violent for two hours last night, smashing the plant windows, setting a small bonfire in the lobby and heaving rocks until 100 police halted the disturbance. Yorty was mocked because he did not intervene in the strike against the Hearst-owned newspaper. (UPI Telephoto)

Tolerance Grows

NEW YORK (UPI)—More Christians would vote for a Jew for president now than would have in 1952, according to Gallup polls sponsored by the Catholic Digest.

Lesson-Sermon

The subject for this week's lesson-sermon to be read in all Christian Science churches tomorrow is "Truth."

Heart Lies Both In Arab Jewish Worlds

JERUSALEM (UPI) —Elias Chacour has his heart in both the Arab and the Jewish worlds, which explains why he has become the first Arab priest to study at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

"I am a Sabra (meaning Israeli-born)," the 27-year-old, black-bearded cleric, explains. "I consider myself 100 per cent Israel as well as 100 per cent Arab.

"These two identities within me are sometimes in conflict, something I have to face."

Born in Kfar Bar'am in northwestern Galilee, Chacour studied theology and philosophy for six years at the St. Sulpice Institute Catholique in Paris. In 1965 he returned to Israel and became the first Greek Catholic priest to be ordained in the country for 25 years.

Chacour was ordained in Nazareth by Archbishop George Hakim, then spiritual head of the Greek-Catholic community in Israel. Hakim now is patriarch of the Greek Catholic church with residence in Damascus.

Father Chacour plans to do three or four years work for a master's degree at Hebrew University, then go for his Ph.D., although this schedule, he says, "depends on my bishop."

At the university he has taken up the humanities, concentrating on the Bible, ancient Semitic languages, comparative religion and the Talmud.

Chacour sees his role at the university as not only student, but also as something of a bridge, a person "who can help my fellow Arab students toward a closer understanding of the Jewish people."

He has made friends with a number of Jewish students. They meet off campus and help each other. "I help them with Greek and Latin," Chacour says, "and they help me with Hebrew."

The young priest is interested in raising the spiritual and intellectual levels of the Arab communities in Israel. He feels that for religious reasons his own Arab Christian community is not always accepted as "Arab" by Moslem Arabs. He believes his mission must be to overcome this.

Chacour regards his comparative youth as an asset in his plans, which he says must include attracting more young people to the priestly calling.

"Most of our priests are old," he notes. "Ten are more than 75 years of age. We need some scores of priests in our villages alone."

Chacour has no ready solution for healing the bitter Arab-Israeli rift, but he thinks a better religious understanding on both sides must be reached. As part of this he says that "contact with Christian Arabs must enter the dialogue between Arabs and Jewis."

A Papal Visit To Brazil Set Late In Summer

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Dom Joao Marchesi, bishop of Rio Negro, said upon his return from Rome Thursday that Pope Paul VI will visit Brazil in August.

It would be the first time a Pope has visited Latin America.

Judaism, Christianity Dialogue Is Improving

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. International

Relations between Jews and Christians have improved remarkably in recent years, particularly on the level of practical cooperation.

But the new dialogue between Judaism and Christianity is bringing to light deep-rooted causes of friction which can't be eliminated simply by getting to know each other better.

"The utopia of true reconciliation is still far away," says Rabbi Ben Zion Bokser of Forest Hills, N.Y., a widely-respected student of Jewish-Christian relations. "While the hand of friendship is to be clasped warmly, we cannot ignore certain issues which remain and which will continue to be troublesome."

A distinguished Christian theologian, Prof. Krister Stendahl of Harvard Divinity School, agrees with this verdict. And he believes it is primarily up to Christians to relieve the tension by re-thinking some of their basic attitudes toward Judaism.

Rabbi Bokser lists three aspects of Christian teaching which Jews find particularly disturbing.

The first is the contention that "Christianity is the true flowering of Judaism, indeed its only true flowering." Judaism is often treated by Christians, not as a living faith in its own right, but as a sort of "fossil religion" —a dry bed left when the river changed course.

Closely related, he says, is "the continued Christian preoccupation with proselytizing the Jews." Christians are committed to the missionary task of trying to convert all people to faith in Christ, and Jews bitterly resent the Christian assumption that Jews must eventually see the error of their ways and enter the Chruch.

Finally, despite efforts in recent years to eliminate some blatantly anti-Semitic overtones of Christian teaching, the story of Christ's crucifixion is still being presented, more often than not, as "a crime perpetrated by Jews."

In so doing, he says, Christians "ignore the findings of historical scholarship which show clearly that the crucifixion was a political action on the part of the Romans," who occupied Judea at the time and governed it with an iron hand.

Rabbi Bokser acknowledges that the Jewish High Priest and his associates "played some part in the apprehension of Jesus," but says that "this in no way shifts the focus of primary responsibility from those who were the true masters of the land."

He says the High Priest was a "Quisling" appointed by and answerable to the Roman occupation authorities. He notes that when patriotic Jews rose in revolt in A.D. 70, "one of their first acts was to execute the reigning High Priest as a traitor to the national cause."

Prof. Stendahl says many anti-Semitic tendencies in Christianity have their origin in passages of the New Testament which are violently critical of Pharisees and other Jewish religious leaders of Jesus' day.

But Christians should bear in mind, he says, that the men who founded the Church and wrote the New Testament were themselves Jews. When they indulged in passionate protests against the Jewish religious establishment, they were speaking — like the great prophets of the Old Testament — from "within the family."

The trouble is that "this prophetic language fell, so to say, into the hands of the Gentiles," as the early Church became increasingly Greek and Roman in membership. Thus the strictures of Jesus against pride and empty formalism were removed from the context of "Jewish self-criticism" and became a vehicle for harsh Gentile judgments on "the Jews."

"The compassionate sorrow of Jesus as he placed himself in the succession of the prophets and wept over Jerusalem hardened into a self-righteous assurance in the Church; and the way in which Jews chose to remain aloof to Christian claims for Jesus as the Messiah angered the frustrated missionaries and theologians so as to make the Jews the primary example of the enemies of Christ," says Prof. Stendahl.

"Such sentiments color practically all expressions of Christian theology from New Testament times to the present." The Harvard scholar suggests that the solution may lie in Christians learning anew to think of themselves as did the Apostles who first preached the gospel: namely, as "a peculiar kind of Jews."

Tam, Marin Catholic, Redwood Triumph

Well folks, its halfway time for the Marin County Athletic League basketball race.

There's the Tamalpais High School Indians, sittin' undefeated at the top of the whole heap with a 6-0 record, just like they were last year at this stage.

And the Indians are still having trouble with Bulldogs.

If games were won on field goals alone, the Indians might be sharing first place today. They got by tough and tough-luck San Rafael at San Rafael last night, riding the crest of a flood of free throws to a 61-52 victory, despite being outshot from the field, 22-16.

The Indians cashed in on 29 of 41 attempts as the Bulldogs were whistled down 25 times to the Indians' 14 nay-nays.

Chief benefactor of charity was Tamalpais center Pat Schafer, who found traffic heavy in San Rafael's stinging zone defense, hitting on 15 of 19 attempts and throwing in six fielders for 27 points.

In other games, Marin Catholic, still using its two-team attack, wrapped up its third straight victory, blasting Novato, 67-57 and moving into third place past the Hornets with a 4-2 mark.

Redwood finally shook off stubborn and winless Terra Linda, 55-41, to remain a game back of Tamalpais, at 5-1.

The Bulldogs gave the Indians a run for their money, leading 13-12 after a quarter and remaining within at least five points through most of the game.

They started the fourth quarter with four starters burdened down by four fouls. Roger Taylor fouled out a minute into the quarter and was joined later by Bob Hewitt and Phil Sleezer as Tam pulled away to a 12-point lead. But two long range swishers by Steve Durham and a drive and lay-in by spunky guard Phil Martino pulled the Bulldogs to within six in what turned out to be their last gasp.

It was San Rafael's fifth loop loss. None of them have been runaways for the junior-heavy squad.

Martino and Durham had 14 points each for the Bulldogs. Sleezer had 10. Floyd Jackson, having an off night from the field, still managed 12 points and Ron Blasingame added 11 for the Indians who are now 13-3 on the season.

Marin Catholic, holding a 36-29 halftime lead, ripped off 10 straight points to open the third quarter and was never in trouble after that, holding as much as a 20-point edge.

Rick Tobin, a member of the second team, whipped in 17 points for the Wildcats and got plenty of help from eight other teammates who hit the scoring column, most notably Ches Bornia with 12.

Ed Herrnberger was tops for Novato with 16 and Steve McNally had 11 points.

Redwood, after cruising to a 27-16 half-time edge behind Darel Ravani and Jim Peters, suddenly found the going rough in the third quarter when Terra Linda guard Pat Purcell scored all of his 12 points, helping to pull the Trojans to within 30-35 at the end start of the final period. But a 20-11 Redwood outburst did the trick.

Six-foot, five-inch Dave Detrick continued to spark the Giants, getting 15 points and hauling in 69 rebounds. Ravani added 12 points for the winners.

Davenport's Ailment Similar To Cepeda's

Jim Davenport diligently has been working out the past two months at Marines' Memorial Gym in San Francisco to bring his left leg back to normal.

Bert Gustafson, physical therapist who prescribed the exercises that strengthened Orlando Cepeda's leg following a knee operation, is directing Davenport's therapy.

"It's fantastic that Davenport was able to play as well as he did these past years," said Gustafson. "His left leg was an inch smaller than the right and 45 per cent under the strength of the right."

An inch smaller around the calf?

"No," said Gustafson. "Above the knee where the quadriceps are."

The quadricepts?

"Yes, the quadricepts. They are the main muscles of the leg, the ones kids build when they run and jump."

Gustafson discovered the deterioration of Davenport's left leg muscles after Herman Franks sent Davenport to the therapist following the close of the 1967 baseball season.

Discovery Of Wasting Muscles

Frank's got to wondering whether Davenport's tendency to tire after several consecutive days in the lineup might be traceable to atrophied muscles, not age. The manager of the Giants might never have thought of weakened muscles in Davenport's leg had it not been for Gustafson's discovery of wasting muscles in Cepeda's leg.

Davenport underwent a knee operation in 1959 for damaged cartilage caused by a crackup with Ed Bailey at home plate in Crosley Field.

His Skill Kept Him On Top

"Davenport had to be a most skillful player to stay on top these past years with the handicap he had," said Gustafson.

Had? Has he remedied it already through the weight lifting and muscle stretching exercises he has been doing the last couple of months?

"Right now," said Gustafson, "his left leg is better than it has been in years. Davenport has been working like a Trojan. By the end of spring training his left should match his right."

"Imagine if we could have him back at third base for 150 games," exclaimed Franks. "I'd love that."

Where would Franks move Jim Ray Hart whose power laden bat, not erratic glove, got him the third base job?

"Left field," said Franks.

L.A. Gets Crosby Weather

By BOB MYERS

PASADENA (AP) — The log jam of top talent prevailed again today as a trimmed down field of 72 golfers prepared for the third round of the $100,000 Los Angeles Open.

Five professionals resumed the assault on par 36-35-71 at the 7,021-yard Brookside Municipal course. Billy Casper, Al Geiberger, Dave Marr, Dave Stockton and George Archer were tied for the lead at 137.

Main concern was the weather. Rain was forecast and seemed evident after a second round played on a chilly, overcast day.

Pasadena, the host city for the event, called it Los Angeles weather. Los Angeles said it was belated Bing Crosby elements.

Ordinarily, the Crosby, famed for vile conditions, would have been played this week at Pebble Beach in Northern California. But a couple of shifts—in the PGA tournament schedule itself and the switch of the Los Angeles Open to Pasadena from neighboring Los Angeles—made things the way they are today.

OPINIONS VARY

Opinions varied about playing in poor weather.

Arnold Palmer, who at 140 with a 71 yesterday was three shots off the front end, said he prefers it warm.

Casper, who moved into the jam with a 67 yesterday, said he enjoys it cold.

Marr, 69, a former PGA champion, strung along with Casper, while Stockton, at 26, is a young man so enthusiastic about golf he couldn't care less what conditions are.

The 139 group listed Gene Littler, Ray Floyd, Steve Eichstaedt and Jack Montgomery, while Palmer's 140 associates were Charlie Sifford, Gardner Dickinson, Jimmy Clark, Ted Makalena and Dave Hill.

Bob Beamon On The Beam In Oakland Track Meet

By JIM CHURCH

OAKLAND (AP) — Bob Beamon plans to reach 28 feet in the long jump and then play professional basketball.

The 21-year-old sophomore at the University of Texas at El Paso won the long jump at only 26-10 at the Athens invitational indoor track and field meet last night at the Arena.

"I was kind of depressed about my performance," said Beamon, who recorded 27-1 for an American indoor record last week. "I haven't reached my peak. Ralph Boston has been warning me against peaking too early before the Olympics. I can hit 28 feet; 27 is just a good jump."

The slim 6-2 Beamon says he will turn out for basketball next season at UTEP en route to a pro career.

Beamon, who shoots for his sixth straight indoor victory tonight in Albuquerque, N. M., shared the Athens spotlight with several others before 6,742 fans.

Lee Evans of San Jose State overtook Ron Whitney of the Southern California Striders and won the 600 in 1:09.7, seven-tenths of a second off the indoor mark. He also anchored a team that won the mile relay in 3:19.6.

"He ran a terrific, tactical race," said Evans' coach, Bud Winter.

SMITH SCRATCHED

A sore hip kept former San Jose State star Tommie Smith from a scheduled appearance in the mile relay.

Tracy Smith, former Oregon State star now in the Army, passed Van Nelson of St. Cloud State when Nelson was struck by a falling pole at the vault pit, and won the three-mile in 13:24.9.

Nelson regained the lead but Smith sprinted away and won by 30 yards. Smith, hopes to run

GIANTS' PERRY:

'Spitballers Will Find New Decoys'

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP) — Gaylord Perry, a San Francisco pitcher who has been accused of throwing a damp ball now and then, isn't sure the new rules are going to wipe out the spit ball.

He took a good natured riding about it from Lou Brock and Rusty Staub who hit against him all year.

Perry, Brock and Staub were in town yesterday as runnersup to Carl Yastrzemski for the Van Heusen Outstanding Achievement Award. Yaz wasn't able to make it because of illness but the three also-rans did.

"When they took that action down in Mexico they did away with several pitchers' habits," said Perry with a grin." "Our pitching coach (Larry Jansen) called me and said I had better start working on a new decoy."

Brock, the St. Louis Cardinals' speedster, kept the gag moving when he commented, "I've seen a few wet decoys come up there to the plate. Maybe that's why I think I got about four hits off Perry in four years."

Staub of the Houston Astros carried the ball after Brock. "Even though the rules committee got together to take away his pitch, I am sure Gaylord will find a way to do the job."

Perry's big achievement of the 1967 season was a string of 40 consecutive scoreless innings, not far short of Carl Hubbell's National League record of 46 1-3 innings.

"It was my own fault," he said. "There was a man on first and when Billy Williams hit the ball back to me I threw it away. What a way to go."

Speaking after the ceremonies, Perry said he never threw the spitter but did use the threat as a decoy.

"I should imagine they (pitchers) still will try to go to the back of the neck for sweat, now that they are not permitted to go to the mouth," he said. "You'll hear more about the vaseline ball, the sweat ball and all that sort of stuff."

Reminded that Cal Koonce of the New York Mets was the only pitcher to admit he threw the spitter, Perry grimaced.

Williams Paces Tars To Comeback Victory

By KIMO CAMPBELL

A superb second-half effort by Guard Russ Williams sparked the College of Marin Tars to a come-from-behind 77-68 Golden Valley Conference victory over the Yuba College 49ers before 100 fans in Marysville last night.

Williams, who had only a single basket at halftime, scored 17 points in the second half as the Tars pulled away late in the game. Williams finished with 19 points, one of four Marin players in double figures. Tom Stetson was the leader with 22, while Russ Smith had 10 and Tom Herrnberger 15.

After a brief 5-2 lead in the opening minutes, the Tars found themselves caught up in a tight scoring duel, as neither team could get a burst of points. The lead changed hands a dozen times, the 49ers enjoying the largest bulge, 32-27, late in the half. With Stetson doing much of the scoring, the Tars narrowed it to two, then tied the score, but Yuba came back to lead 38-36 at the intermission.

CLINCH LEAD

Marin went ahead 45-42 early in the second half on field goals by Stetson and Keith Kornelis, but Yuba rallied to tie at 48-48 and 50-50. The Tars went ahead for good at 55-54 on a Stetson free throw, then broke the game open, two straight jumpers by Williams icing the lead at 67-57 with six minutes left.

Yuba nibbled it to 65-71 with 1:22 to go, but the Tars were not to be caught by then.

Marin and Yuba both employed a zone defense most of the time, Marin using a 1-3-1 and Yuba starting with a full-court

Seals Leave 'Indifferent' Billy Harris At Home

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) —The Oakland Seals open a five-game eastern tour of the National Hockey League against Minnesota tonight still minus the services of center Billy Harris.

Coach Bert Olmstead suspended Harris last Saturday for dressing and leaving Oakland Arena after being benched in the second period of a losing effort against New York.

"He hasn't convinced me he's ready to knuckle down and perform in the way he's capable," said Olmstead. "It is better that he have more time to consider his position."

Harris, last year's Most Valuable Player with Pittsburgh in the American Hockey League, has been benched and fined several times for "indifferent play."

In drubbing Los Angeles 4-1 Wednesday, the last-place Seals won their first road game since Nov. 30.

Oregon Basketball Star Is Suspended

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) —Coach Steve Belko suspended senior Bob Craven from the University of Oregon basketball team yesterday, saying Craven had an indifferent attitude.

Craven will not be in uniform for Oregon's game with Oregon State in Corvallis Saturday afternoon nor for the game with Utah Monday night in Eugene.

S.F. Boat Second In Cup Series

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Richard Stearns of Chicago, who came in no better than third in any of the five races, won the Bacardi Cup Series yesterday with a total of 142 over-all points.

Stearns, who also won the event last year, edged Tom Blackaller of San Francisco, who scored 140, by sliding past him in the final minutes of the last race. The 12-inch margin that Stearns' boat had over Blackaller's was enough to make the 1962 world Starboat champion the Bacardi winner.

In the two races held yesterday, Blackaller won the morning event while 1964 Olympic champion Durward Knowles of Nassau, Bahamas, captured the nightcap.

Aker And A's Mend Hurts, Sign Pact

OAKLAND (AP) — Time and geography apparently have healed the feelings of pitcher Jack Aker, who has signed for the coming season with the Oakland Athletics after demanding last summer to be traded under threat of quitting baseball.

Aker made his demand during the player uprising which resulted in the fining and suspension of pitcher Lew Krausse and the eventual firing of Manager Alvin Dark. At that time the team made its home in Kansas City.

Then owner Charles O. Finley moved the franchise to Oakland —and Aker and Krausse were the first to sign up.

A spokesman for the A's said Aker wrote to Finley, said he wanted to let bygones be bygones and intended to report in good shape for spring training. They quickly agreed on the telephone on a new contract at an unannounced figure, said to be slightly lower than Aker got in 1967.

An indicated reason was that Aker's family home is in Visalia, and he moved back to Visalia from Independence, Mo., only four days after the A's moved to Oakland.

Warriors Now Just Another Ball Club

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Without gangling center Nate Thurmond, the San Francisco Warriors are just another club in the National Basketball Association.

The Baltimore Bullets capitalized on a torrid third-quarter surge last night to outscore the Warriors 40-16 en route to a 125-110 victory before 4,532 at the Cow Palace. It was the first time in five games this season that the Eastern Division cellar dwellers have been able to beat San Francisco.

TRAIL ST. LOUIS

The Warriors, who slipped seven games behind the Western Division leader St Louis, tackle the New York Knicks at Madison Square Garden tomorrow afternoon to open a three-game road trip. Thurmond is sidelined for the rest of the season with torn knee ligaments. Without Thurmond, their top scorer and tireless defender, the Warriors have dropped two games in a row.

Baltimore (19-30) trailed by as much as 15 points in the first half which ended with San Francisco leading 67-54. But the Warriors hit only 6 of 32 shots from the floor in the third period as they fell behind 94-83.

Rookie Earl Monroe, Gus Johnson and Kevin Loughery sparked the Bullet surge. Monroe tallied 11 of his 35 points in the third period.

WINTER GAMES

Miss Fleming Best U.S. Bet For Olympics Gold

GRENOBLE, France (UPI)—She looks like the girl next door—until you see her on the ice.

In fact, Peggy Fleming, a pert, 19-year-old University of Colorado sophomore, seems America's best bet to take a coveted gold medal in the 10th Winter Olympics which get underway Feb. 6.

"I'm going to give it a good try," said the reigning world figure skating champion as she watched the U.S. pairs skaters try out yesterday in Grenoble's spectacular gull-winged ice palace.

"I try not to think about coming into the Olympics as a favorite," she said tugging at one of her long, dark pigtails. "I am trying to think of myself as an underdog in order not to get nervous.

"I expect my biggest competition will come from the East Germans and Czechoslovakians who were runners up to me last year in the worlds in Vienna," said the young skating star.

RUGGED SCHEDULED

She skates six to seven hours a day, six days a week, 11 months out of the year.

"I kind of enjoy it," she said when asked if she didn't find the pace rather demanding, "though there are times when I wish I were doing something else.

"I've been skating since I was nine," she said softly, "first in Los Angeles and now in Colorado Springs where we moved three years ago.

"I'm studying to be an elementary school teacher and will probably only keep skating through the World Championships in 1969 at the Broadmore in Colorado Springs," she added. "After that I don't know."

Professionalism? "I don't know, I really haven't thought about it."

"The village is a bit lonely because there are only us and the Japanese and South Korean girl skaters here," she said, "and nothing is open yet—not even the drugstore.

"But aside from that and the soggy wet weather, everything is fine and I feel in great form."

Redwood All Alone Atop 'B' League

The Giants tipped Terra Linda, 37-36, in a battle of co-leaders at Redwood last night, winning it on Kent Skov's free throw with a second left.

Terra Linda had tied it at 36-36 all with four minutes left. The Trojans didn't see the ball again until after Skov's game-winner, which was a little late. The Giants went in a 3:59 stall that finally won it.

The win gave Redwood a 5-1 record, a game ahead of the Trojans, who dropped into a second-place tie with Drake and Novato at 4-2.

Novato took a low-pressure 33-26 game from winless Marin Catholic behind Gary Howard's 14 points. Mike Luchessa was the whole show for the Wildcats with an 18-point effort.

San Rafael moved to within two games of the lead, evening its record at 3-3 with a 60-42 romp over Tamalpais as Bruce Nave and Lowell Widmer scored 12 points each and Tony Nathe had 13.

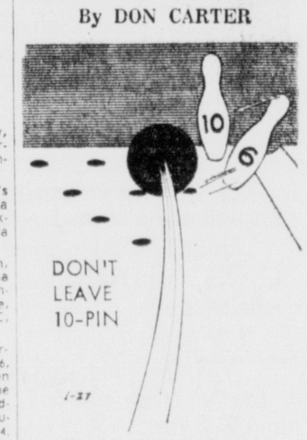
BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER



One of the most disheartening happenings in bowling is the shot that chops the No. 6 pin from a 6-10 leave. It looks nearly impossible, but it happens to someone in almost every team match. There is no surefire formula for avoiding such a heartbreaker, but to reduce the chances of it I suggest moving as far as possible to the opposite corner of the approach. If there is no ball return on your left, even cheat an inch or two and move a bit outside your normal approach area.

Soccer League Splits Into Four Divisions

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The North American Soccer League divided its 17 teams yesterday between two conferences, with two divisions in each conference.

A New York franchise was awarded to Peter Elser, 47, an investment broker who was a co-owner of a team last year.

Nine teams were assigned to the Eastern Conference and eight to the Western Conference.

The Eastern has Atlanta, Boston, Baltimore, New York and Washington in the Atlantic Division; Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit and Toronto in the Lakes Division.

The Western includes Los Angeles, Oakland, San Diego and Vancouver in the Pacific Division; Dallas, Houston, Kansas City and St. Louis in the Gulf Division.

SCHEDULE SET

Each team will play two home and two road games against each team in its own division, at least one home and one road game against each team in the other division in its own conference, and at least one game either at home or on the road against every team in the other conference.

The 23-week schedule opens March 31 and close Sept. 8. Division leaders will have playoffs Sept. 14 to decide the conference championships, then the conference titlists will meet Sept. 21 for the league championship.

The schedule calls for 16 games at home for each team. Some games will be on Tuesdays and Wednesday and the others on Friday's, Saturdays or Sundays depending upon availability of stadiums. A league spokesman said Sunday games will be in the daytime, but most of the others will be at night.

One game will be televised nationally each week.

press and then falling back into a zone. Yuba had some success in the first half when its outside shooters hit over the zone, but when they went cold in the second half and Kornelis and Stetson began to grab more rebounds (Stetson led with 12) the Tars had the whip hand, since Williams was hot from outside.

Tar coach Cal Riemcke will take it, though. "I'm happy with even ONE point wins on the road," he said. Riemcke also praised Williams for a "very fine game" and expressed pleasure at "the way the boys are playing as a team."

Tonight the Tars, now 11-8 overall and 6-1 in the Golden Valley Conference, face tough Lassen (4-1, second in the rough Eastern Division) at Susanville.

UP, UP AND AWAY

Mill Valley skiers Dr. Kleve Johnson (left) and his son, Eric, were among those at Alpine Meadows last weekend who sampled the new Alpine Bowl double chair lift. The new lift provides a variety of expert ski runs, and brings to twelve the number of lifts that now serve skiers daily at Alpine. Snow depths range from 48 to 68 inches and skiing is reported to be very good.

UCLA Romps, But 'Home' Fans Boo Lew

By BOB GREEN

NEW YORK (AP) — Holy Cross coach Jack Donohue got his first look at Lew Alcindor in about three years. So he looked. And looked. And then he sighed.

"He's too much," Donohue said after the 7-foot-1½ UCLA star led the Bruins to a 90-67 rout of his Crusaders in Madison Square Garden last night.

"But I wasn't surprised," said Donohue, who was Alcindor's high school coach at Power Memorial in Manhattan. "He's just bigger, stronger, has more moves. He's all I would have expected from the kid I had now that he's three years older."

It was Alcindor's first game before the home town folks since his high school days, and he responded with 33 points—16 in less than 10 minutes—22 rebounds, five blocked shots and a couple of assists.

And he's still bothered, just a little, by the eye injury that forced him to miss two games and contributed to a subpar performance in UCLA's upset loss to Houston a week ago.

"There's still a little blur," said big Lew, who was more concerned with the occasional boos he got from the crowd of 18,106, which included a large Holy Cross contingent.

"I was kind of puzzled," Alcindor said. "You know, this was kind of a home game for me. I wanted to look good, wanted to play well before my friends and family."

He did well enough.

The Bruins, now ranked No. 2 with a 14-1 record, spotted outmanned Holy Cross a 4-2 lead in the opening moments, then reeled off 13 straight points—six by Alcindor—and took a lead that stood up the rest of the way.

A 12-point burst later in the first half gave the Bruins a 36-16 lead and they coasted in. Alcindor had 16 points at that time, with 10:57 remaining in the first half.

Holy Cross, now 7-6, simply didn't have a chance. Ed Siudut was its biggest starter at 6-7 and the intimidating figure of Alcindor, lurking under the baskets, the top of his head almost brushing the strings, forced the Crusaders outside and they just weren't equal to it.

The Crusaders hit only 26 of 73 field goal tries while UCLA had a 50.6 percentage, including 16 of 30 for big Lew, who left with three minutes of playing time left.

Lynn Shackleford, filling in for Edgar Lacey, who was left at home by his own choice, had 14 points and Mike Lynn added 12 for UCLA. Studut had 19 points for Holy Cross and Keith Hochstein had 22.

The Bruins, defending national champions and on the rebound after their 47-game winning string was snapped at Houston, take on Boston College, 9-4, in the Garden tonight.

The 10th-ranked Utah Redskins, the only other team in The Associated Press Top 10 to see action, lost their third straight game. The Washington Huskies, led by Dave Carr's 27 points, upset the Redskins at Seattle 93-76. Marv Jackson led the Utes with 24.

Fairfield, which plays top-ranked Houston at Houston Monday night, downed Niagara 89-85 at New Haven. Calvin Murphy, Niagara's star soph, scored 28 points in his first college game in Connecticut since his days at Norwalk High School. Larry Cirina sparked Fairfield with 33.

Jim Eakins' 25 points paced Brigham Young to an 81-59 victory over University of Texas at El Paso, and Jim Tillman's 29 points led Chicago Loyola over Marquette 79-71 in a doubleheader at Chicago Stadium.

Wyoming beat its traditional rival, Colorado State U., 84-68 at Fort Collins, Colo. Hofstra took a 109-71 road drubbing from Florida State and Stetson, playing at home, lost to the Miami Hurricanes 72-67.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday Jan. 27, the 27th day of 1968 with 339 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning star is Venus. The evening stars are Mars, Saturn, Jupiter and Mercury.

On this day in history:

In 1880 Thomas Edison was granted a patent for an electric incandescent lamp.

In 1943 the 8th Air Force staged World War II's first all-American air raid on Germany, bombing Wilhelmshaven in daylight.

In 1964, Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, R.-Maine, became the first woman to challenge for the presidential nomination of a major party.

In 1967 astronauts Virgil Grissom, Edward White and Roger Chaffee died when their capsule caught fire during a dry-run test at Cape Kennedy.

A thought for the day: Bridge expert Ely Culbertson said, "We must conquer war, or war will conquer us."

TIME AND TIDE

Department of Commerce, United States Coast Geodetic Survey. Times and heights of tides at San Francisco (Golden Gate):

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Action By Declarer Can Be Key Signal For The Opening Lead

It isn't always necessary for your partner to signal what he thinks of your opening lead. way declarer plays.

Opening lead — ♠ K

West opened the king of spades, and declarer played the nine from dummy. East followed suit with the four, and South with the deuce.

West came to the conclusion that his partner had played his lowest spade to discourage a spade continuation.

NOTION IN MIND

With this added notion in mind, West shifted to the eight of diamonds. South hopefully played low from dummy, and East had to play the king to win the trick. Now South could eventually get rid of a spade on dummy's queen of diamonds. This was all he needed to make the game and rubber.

SHOULD CONTINUE

It's clear to us, since we can see all the cards, that West would defeat the contract if he continued with a low spade at the second trick. Declarer would have to put up dummy's ace of spades. West would get in with the king of clubs to take a second spade trick, and East would also get the king of diamonds.

"How can I tell?" West asked when the hand was over.

SPADE LEAD?

"Where did you think the jack of spades was?" East asked in return. This was the key question. If South had the jack of spades he would win the first trick with dummy's ace to make sure of two spade tricks.

East obviously had the jack of spades but couldn't afford to signal with it (since then South could finesse with the ten of spades to lose only one spade trick).

♣ A Q J.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. The had is nearly, but not quite, worth an opening bid of one heart. Change one of the low spades to a low heart, and you would open the bidding.

Marijuana Case Jury Deadlocks

A Marin Superior Court jury Thursday declared itself unable to decide in the case of Bernard G. Gonzales, 35, charged with possession of marijuana.

The jurors reported they were deadlocked, eight to four for conviction of Gonzales, who lives at 18 Bayside Street, San Rafael.

Gonzales, accused of having a plastic bag containing enough marijuana for three or four cigarettes in his room July 13, is to return to court Monday for resetting of a trial date.

Draft Office Callous In Life-Or-Death Role

IN A SENSE, THE DRAFT BOARD has the power of life and death over our young men.

This awesome power obviously should be exercised with great restraint, safeguards, caution and deep consideration for the young men involved.

There is evidence that the staff in the San Rafael office of Selective Service does not always proceed with restraint nor with consideration for the young men with whom it deals.

There is evidence that the staff of the local draft board office at times forgets it is the servant of those whom it serves and not the master.

THERE IS EVIDENCE THAT at least some of the young ladies in the office at 819 A Street in San Rafael are unaware that since July 4, 1776, employees of government on this side of the Atlantic are no longer the enforcers of the monarch's absolute power over the citizenry.

At least some of those young ladies need re-teaching that they are the servants of the public, not the masters. They need to be made to understand that they owe courtesy, consideration and serious attention to each of the young citizens with whom they come in contact. Rudeness, lack of sympathetic understanding or lack of demonstrated desire to be helpful to those served should be replaced by politeness and sympathetic helpfulness.

THE MEMBERS OF OUR San Rafael draft board — Neil McIsaac, Warren Crane and Eugene Ostaggi — are men well and favorably known in our community over many decades.

There is evidence these men are aware that the staff at 819 A Street doesn't always accord to the public the reception which the public is entitled to receive from public servants.

If they are powerless to correct the situation, because of civil service or other conditions, perhaps we of the citizenry need to look elsewhere for correction — to our congressman, to civil service headquarters or to Selective Service headquarters.

NOT LONG AGO A TEEN-AGE student in good scholastic standing at junior college received through the mail, without explanation, notice that he had been reclassified 1-A. This of course was obviously contrary to all provisions of the 2-S classifications giving deferment for students in good scholastic standing. The notice ignored a letter in the young student's Selective Service file in which a doctor reported medical conditions that unquestionably would lead to a 4-F classification.

When the young victim of this cruel mistake tried to find out by telephone and personal visit why he was reclassified and what could be done about it, he was met with rudeness, a lack of sympathetic understanding, and an absence of any indication of any desire to be helpful.

To this day, the young man has not received any plausible explanation of the foul-up.

At first he was told to prepare an appeal, if he wished to question the reclassification. Subsequently, he was told to forget the appeal.

So far as he knew, his 1-A classification still stood. Nearly six weeks later, he received in the mail, without explanation, a new 2-S draft card — dated six weeks earlier.

Apology? It is doubtful if the meaning of the word is understood among the San Rafael Selective Service office staff.

THERE LIVES IN MARIN a professional man who came to this land of freedom from Europe many, many years ago. Sometimes when he is in a reflective mood, he will recall the "amtsschimmel" of the Austro-Hungarian Empire. Amtsschimmel in Emperor Franz Joseph's day was a term of opprobrium applied to the bureaucracy and red tape of that decaying empire.

Nowadays this same Marin resident upon occasion wistfully longs for the good old days when even amtsschimmel was not so irritating as the red tape of some of today's American government agencies.

If he were of draft age, we would be sure he was thinking of the staff of the San Rafael office of Selective Service.

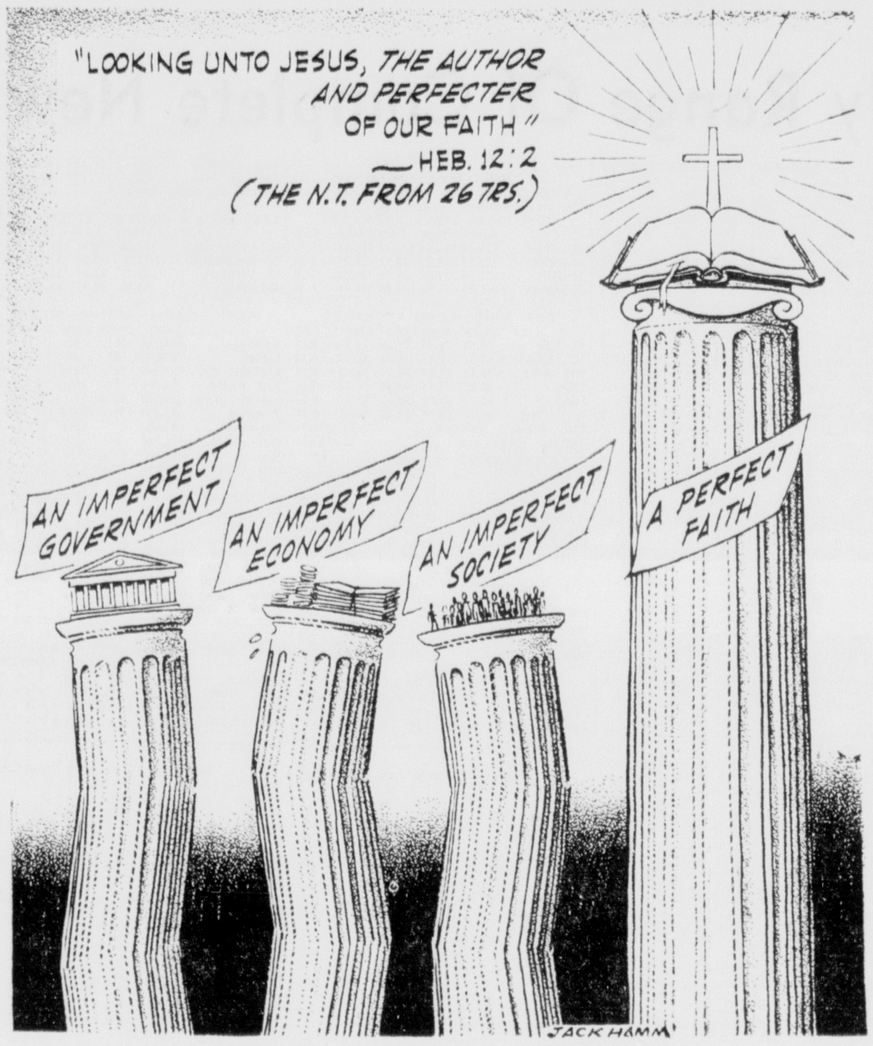
Quote of the week: "Youth has learned from adults that rebellion can be expressed without fear of retaliation. If teacher strikes and sanctions, and parental boycotts and sit-ins, win the day for adults why shouldn't students risk a general nose-thumbing at the whole educational establishment?"—Mortimer Smith in Council for Basic Education Bulletin.



The Very Nature of Things

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Chamber Proposal Silliest Of Season

Editor, Independent-Journal:

The San Rafael Chamber of Commerce has come up with the silliest suggestion of the season . . . an eight-lane freeway to San Francisco to solve the commute problem. They say the private car and not public transportation is the key to the commuters' problem.

Consider what eight lanes would do! Twice as many cars on the highway. Sausalito would be carved up to carry an express lane to the City. A double deck for the Golden Gate. Slash up the Marina to accommodate at least a four-lane highway. Glut San Francisco with Marin cars. The city as we know it now has more cars than it can accommodate.

The chamber's solution ignores people—People who now rely on public transportation; those who cannot afford two cars; those that cannot drive; those that take the buses for safety reasons. The chamber says you must drive and forget public transportation.

Their suggestion is not only backward but irresponsible and ignores the studied considerations of experts. It also ignores a world that is fast becoming disenchanted with being pushed aside and smoked out by the eight cylinder super chrome, steel monster built for five but containing an average of 1½ passengers.

Now if the San Rafael Chamber would attack the traffic problems of their home town we might find a place to park, in San Rafael.

Marin Shorted On Park Funds

Editor, Independent-Journal:

If the statement by State Director of Parks William Penn Mott in yesterday's (Jan. 23) Independent-Journal is correct, Marin is being short-changed out of about $600,000 of its share of 1964 park bonds.

The park commission recommended and the state legislature set aside $4,000,000 to be spent in expanding Marin's major asset — a park stretching from Mount Tam to the ocean. Apparently only about $3,400,000 has or will be spent when the Brazil-Sousa ranch is purchased from the church. This land incidentally includes only a tiny fragment of ocean frontage.

Other properties originally authorized but not yet purchased are largely oceanfront — lands which, when added to the future Marin Headlands park, would give the county a true coastal park stretching, with a few minor exceptions, from the Golden Gate to Point Reyes. This shoreline area is treasured by thousands of amateur and professional marine ecologists (those happy browsers amid the tidal pools), hikers, picnickers, campers and rock fishermen. . . .

Guts, Not Magic Needed On Taxes

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I read with interest your editorial of Monday, Jan. 15.

I don't agree that the governor needs "magic" to achieve real property tax relief. When a widow on a $200 a month income who has lived in the same home for 30 years has to sell it because of the unfairness of the real property tax, there is something wrong that something less than "magic" could solve. The point is that this widow pays the same proportion of real property tax as someone who has a $100,000 a year income; that's what's wrong with the system!

No, it's not "magic" that is needed, it is just some hard political guts in Sacramento to do something about this absurd tax.

Transit Study Injured By Political Dismissals

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Gov. Ronald Reagan did a distinct disservice to Bay Area citizens this week by emasculating the Bay Area Transportation Study Commission.

Reagan used his political muscle to dump four commissioners whose four-year appointments had expired. The four are Mrs. Margaret B. Azevedo of Tiburon, a Marin County planning commissioner; John C. Beckett, a Peninsula resident who lived in Kentfield for many years; Ben K. Lerer, San Francisco attorney, and Timothy J. Richardson, San Francisco labor leader.

NO ONE COULD argue that the governor did not have the right to disrupt the commission at this critical state of its work, but several arguments could be made that disruption of an important public body to pay off political debts was an unwise move.

First, the commission has been workinf for four years, and just now is getting into its final report. New commissioners can hardly be expected to get the hang of the work much before the commission goes out of existence in one year.

Second, two of the commissioners who got the ax accounted for much of the commission's work. The two are Mrs. Azevedo, who perhaps knows more about the commission's activities than any other commissioner, and Beckett, who was the commission's richest source of leadership and fresh thinking.

It seems a safe assumption that the commission's final report will be considerably weakened without their contributions.

IRONICALLY, Beckett is a Republican. He was absolutely a political when it came to transportation, but as an outspoken advocate of mass transportation he reportedly displeased some of the governor's closest advisers — the oil and highway interests.

Members of the governor's staff reportedly conceded Beckett was a valuable member of the commission, but complained "he was working in the wrong direction." In other words, Beckett had failed to place utter dependence on the private automobile to move people in an urban area.

One commissioner observed that the commission lost its political security with the death of Sen. J. Eugene McAteer of San Francisco. McAteer, who authored the bill that created the commission, "would never have let this happen; he would have punched the governor in the nose," said the commissioner.

A capitol observer, however, commented that Reagan "would have done it anyway, even with McAteer here. That's the way the governor operates — he hardly ever consults with the legislators," he said.

A LOCAL ANGLE to the firings: Mrs. Azevedo now will have more time to campaign for supervisor — but also has lost a little political stature because she no longer is a commissioner. Political firings, of course, do not carry much of an onus.

A SENATOR'S NOTEBOOK

Don't Believe Tense Conference Tales

By EVERETT McKINLEY DIRKSEN

There is one practice of government at the highest level that, as much as anything else, provides a testament to the majesty and greatness of our free republic. That is the joint leadership meeting of both political parties and both branches of Congress with the President.

There have been numerous stories told about those meetings in the White House that would have you believe they become very spirited and even testy and combative in character. Such is not the case today and such has not been the case in recent times, if ever, and for one extraordinary reason.

The president served in a legislative capacity with nearly every one of those leaders before he went to the White House. The spirit of the joint leadership meetings is conditioned by his previous relations with the leaders of the Republican and Democratic parties in the Senate and the House of Representatives.

ON THE MAJORITY side of the aisle in the Senate, the president served with Sen. Carl Hayden of Arizona, who is now president pro-tempore of the Senate; Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana, the present majority leader; Sen. Russell B. Long of Louisiana, marjority whip, or deputy leader and Sen. George A. Smathers of Florida, secretary of the Democratic conference.

On the Republican minority side of the aisle, Mr. Johnson has served with me, the minority leader; with Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel of California, minority whip; Sen. Milton R. Young of North Dakota, secretary of the Republican conference; with Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper of Iowa, chairman of the Republican policy committee; Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, chairman of the Republican conference and with Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, vice chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee.

The president knows these senators well and we know him.

WHEN THE JOINT Senate leadership is invited to the White House for a conference it is not as though the invitation went out to strangers who would sit with the president to discuss the terrible problems that preoccupy all of our minds. No, we sit with him as old friends with whom he has fought and bled, so to speak, on many a legislative battlefield.

And the same situation is substantially true of the leaders in the House. The president served three terms as a U.S. representative from 1939 to 1948, when he was elected to the Senate, where he served until 1961. Either he served in the House with Speaker John W. McCormack, with Majority Whip Hale Boggs, Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford Jr., Minority Whip Leslie C. Arends, and with Congressmen Melvin R. Laird, Charles E. Goodell and others, or he met them on conference committees, at joint sessions or at social functions.

MANY OF THESE senators and congressmen battled Congressman Johnson, and then Senator Johnson, for many years. He and we were fores who came to respect each other; sort of like opposing centers in a football scrimmage who fight each other every minute of play, but who are solid friends away from the gridiron.

These veterans of the legislative wards still do battle with him on many occasions and assert many sharp differences of opinion over both foreign and domestic policy. But no matter how wide or how sharp the disagreement between the president and the joint leadership may be, it is always thoroughly exlored and discussed in the most amicable fashion.

So don't you believe it when you hear a story of hostility between these old legislative friends meeting on serious matters at the White House. The national leaders of both parties sit down around the same big table with the president and, in the spirit of friendships that were formed in honorable political conflict, seek sensible solutions for problems wheret he national interest is involved.

Scandinavian Revolt Not Aimed At Welfare State

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

The socialists have just suffered their third straight setback among the Scandinavian nations which were the first in the west to adopt socialism and its principles of the welfare state.

In Denmark, Danish voters defeated the Social Democratic party which had been in power the last 15 years.

Norway ousted its socialist government in 1965 after 30 years of rule.

In Sweden, while Social Democrat Premier Tage Erlander remains in power, his party suffered its worst setback in 30 years in municipal elections last year.

IN ITSELF, the welfare state was not an issue in any of the three elections.

The welfare state concept is, in fact, a phenomenon no longer limited to socialist states, as can be attested to by the growing list of social benefits promoted both by the executive and the Congress of the United States.

As elsewhere, the effort to expand cradle-to-the-grave protection to the people may be expected to continue.

In the Scandinavian states, therefore, the voter rebellion was not against the welfare state but rather against the high cost of paying for it.

IN DENMARK, the voters were protesting steadily rising taxes and the cost of services. Prices have risen more than 40 per cent in thelast seven years and unemployment is on the increase.

In Norway, the fiery banners of labor lost their influence among a growing white-collar middle class which voted for right and center parties promising no reduction in the welfare state but at the same time a reduction in taxes, wider opportunities, more housing and better education.

Until last year, the Swedish people had shown themselves willing to shoulder heavy taxation as the cost of security.

But in late 1966, as in Norway a year earlier, the voters rebelled against high prices, high taxation, inflation and a severe housing shortage.

It is noteworthy in all three countries, Denmark, Sweden and Norway, foreign policies were minor issues.

THREE MINUTES A DAY

DON'T FEEL SORRY FOR YOURSELF

A valuable lesson can be learned from these words of a 10-year-old boy in Bismarck, N.D., who was born without arms and legs:

"I know there are some things I cannot do. But I think of all the things I can do and I don't worry so much about the rest of it."

Many persons think that because they can't do everything in coping with the problems of life, they need not do anything. No matter how limited your range of action may be, do what you can.

The following lines by Edward Everett Hale may serve as a reminder:

"I am only one, but I am one.
I can't do everything but I can do something,
And what I can do, that I ought to do,
And what I ought to do,
By the grace of God, I will do."

"I have great confidence in you. I have great pride in you." (2 Corinthians 7:4)

Remind us, O God, that we are important in Your sight.

TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

A tearful woman had a strong case when she sued her brawny husband for divorce. "He beat me up three times a day, Your Honor," she wailed. French-English Rift Widens Faster All Over Canada

QUEBEC (AP) — The French-Canadian separatist movement, strengthened by new leadership and encouraged by the views of French President Charles de Gaulle, shows signs of broadening its narrow political base in Quebec province.

The minority movement, growing at a snail's pace for the last 10 years amid the sweeping social change of Quebec's "quiet revolution," attracted significant new support in 1967 among professional politicians.

But separatism also picked up a notable number of new opponents, including the Opposition Liberal party which rejected separatism "in all its forms" and Premier Daniel Johnson, who rejected separatism "for the moment."

Johnson believes that French-speaking Canadians, 80 per cent of whom live in Quebec province, can remain within the Canadian federal structure, provided constitutional changes make them "feel at home in all Canada."

In the existing constitutional setup under the 1867 British North America Act, Quebec is the only Canadian province where both French and English enjoy official status in the legislature, courts and schools.

Bilingualism in some form was recommended to the nine other provinces, which are unilingually English, by a federal royal commission of inquiry whose language recommendation will be studied by the provinces and federal government in February.

While federalist politicians prepare for discussions on bilingualism at constitutional talks called by Prime Minster Lester Pearson, the separatist plan meetings to find ways of struggling out of the political wilderness.

They view the provincial state as the sole savior of the French culture in North America, arguing that only in Quebec can French-Canadians master their destiny, for only here do they form a majority.

They contend that French-Canadians, who numbered 5,540,000 or 30 per cent of the Canadian population in the 1961 census, can never live with dignity in Canada because they will forever be a minority.

The best way to protect the French culture in predominantly English-language North America, they claim, is to build Quebec into an independent state whose sole official language would be French.

In Quebec, according to the 1961 census, the French-speaking population numbered about 4,200,000 or more than 81 per cent of the provinical population. The remaining 1,340,000 French-Canadians live in other provinces.

Two events in 1967 make separatists view their future with optimism — the state visit of De Gaulle in July and the resignation from the Quebec Liberal party in October of an influential politician, former Quebec Cabinet Minister Rene Levesque.

Emotionally, separatism's finest moment came that night in July when De Gaulle mounted the balcony of Montreal's city hall to shout the separatist rallying cry, "Vive le Quebec Libre" — Long Love Free Quebec.

Politically, separatism's biggest gain came when Levesque broke with the Liberal party to advocate establishing an independent Quebec linked to the rest of Canada by a form of economic "common market."

Levesque, among the province's most popular politicians, is heading a movement to regroup separatist forces in a single separatist party whose policies would attract wider popular support.

Many Levesque supporters scorn oldtime separatists as immature, complex-ridden characters whose real rallying cry is "Maudit Anglais" — Damn English — not "Quebec Libre."

Levesque's campaigning in Quebec since he quit the Liberal party has produced indications he may be able to extend support for separatism beyond its base among middleclass intellectuals.

Almost all observers concede that Levesque will be able to increase support for separatism, but few would agree with his personal forecast that Quebec independence is only four years from realization.

In fact many separatists say privately that they anticipate continued tough going, electorally, arising from lack of widespread support in the politically powerful rural areas.

Despite these electoral problems the separatist issue is taken seriously, at least by Quebec politicians, because it represents an extreme expression of a broadly based form of French-Canadian nationalism.

This new nationalism, forged amid profound social change as Quebec adjusted to accelerated urban and industrial growth, views the state as guardian of the French culture. A large proportion of its adherents are in universities, the professions and intellectual circles.

The Liberals applied this nationalism in constitutional terms by urging that Quebec have special status in Canada as the principal home of "la nation Canadienne-Francaise."

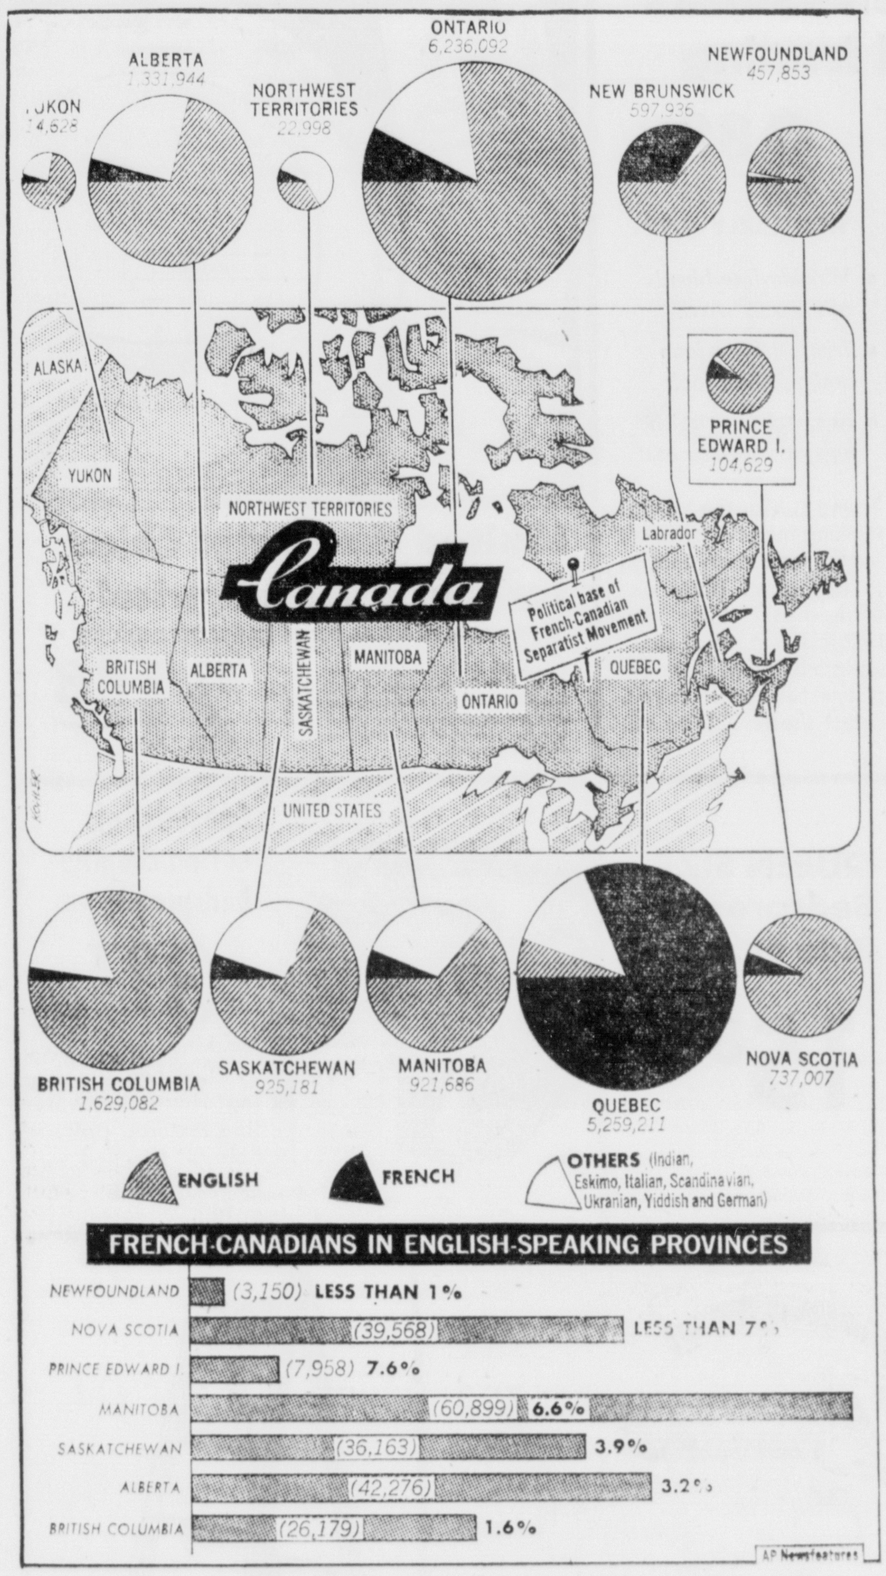
Some of the country's most outspoken opponents of separatism include French-Canadians in other provinces, centered mostly in neighboring Ontario — 425,000 or 7 per cent of the population — and New Brunswick — 211,000 or 35 per cent.

The French-Canadian minority outside Quebec tend to identify the federal government as the government in the best position to preserve the French fact in Canada and see themselves as the key to French language expansion.

As a result French-Canadian separatism is confined almost exclusively to Quebec, although some radicals suggest an independent French state including bordering regions of northwestern New Brunswick and northeastern Ontario.

The proportion of Canadians whose ethnic origin is French remains virtually the same today as at the time of confederation in 1867 when it numbered slightly more than 1,000,000 or 30 per cent of the total population.

At confederation, more than 929,000 lived in the province of Quebec and French-Canadians then formed about 14 per cent of the provinces of Ontario, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.



Behind The News

This Week In The World

By United Press International

In the cold war that grows hotter the United States has felt it necessary to maintain a vast network of eavesdropping equipment on land and sea, in the air and space to determine the military preparedness of its enemies and potential enemies.

The USS Pueblo, with a crew of 83 and millions of dollars in electronic equipment for carrying out such a mission, was on a 30-day intelligence-gathering cruise in the Sea of Japan when a brief, dramatic radio message wrote an end to the mission.

From North Korea's Wonsan harbor the Pueblo said she had come to "all stop" and was "going off the air."

The events that preceeded the message by only a few hours stunned U.S. officials and angered congressional leaders to the point that some called for a declaration of war. With two MIGs flying overhead, North Korean patrol boats had stopped the Pueblo. An armed party boarded her, then forced the ship to follow the patrol boats into Wonsan.

In announcing the seizure of the Pueblo, officially termed "a Navy intelligence collection auxiliaryship," U.S. officials called it "intolerable" and "without precedent." They said the Pueblo had been seized in international waters about 25 miles from the mainland and there would be no satisfactory conclusion to the incident until the ship and crew were returned safely.

North Korea called the Pueblo an "armed" spy boat" and said it had been seized in its territorial water, which begin 12 miles offshore.

Immediate diplomatic attempts to free the ship failed and at the weekend the United States turned to the United Nations for action.

President Johnson, in a move seen as adding psychological pressures to diplomatic maneuvers, called up 26 reserve units with 14,787 men. The move meant the activation of 372 planes. The units were apparently to be ready to relieve those that were or could be called to Southeast Asia to stand by for any military action.

Some fighter-bomber squadrons were moved into South Korea from Okinawa and the giant carrier Enterprise and her escort ships took up positions off the North Korean coast, having been diverted from the coast of Vietnam.

Around The World; Around The Clock:

Seoul: North Korean infiltrators staged a lightening raid against the South Korean capital, the first since the end of the Korean war. Three Americans were wounded in action against the infiltrators. The North Koreans have been staging a growing number of raids against Allied units just across the truce line, apparently to divert U.S. energies from the Vietnam war.

Saigon: The U.S. Marine stronghold of Khe Sanh underwent intense rocket and artillery fire and probing ground attacks from at least 20,000 North Vietnamese soldiers massed in the area for what is believed to be a full-scale attack. U.S. planes pounded the enemy in support of the 5,000 Marines at the stronghold in the extreme northwest corner of South Vietnam.

Washington: Clark M. Clifford, President Johnson's choice to replace Defense Secretary Robert McNamara, told the Senate Armed Services Committee he would favor a halt in the bombing of North Vietnam if Hanoi agreed to a "minimal" concession.

Washington: John W. Gardner resigned as secretary of Health, Education and Welfare after criticizing the nation in a recent speech for neglecting its social needs. Gardner denied he quit because of disagreements with the administration.

Thule, Greenland: A U.S. B52 bomber, carrying four unarmed hydrogen bombs, crashed on the arctic ice off the coast of Greenland. Seven crewmen parachuted to safety and one was killed. Portions of the hydrogen bombs were found on nuclear contaminated ice and a 40-man search team continued the hunt for other parts of the bombs. U.S. officials said there was no danger of the bombs exploding.

Washington: President Johnson, in messages to Congress, asked for the passage of a civil rights measure, about $3 billion in economic and military foreign aid, and a new large-scale effort to get private industry to hire the "hard core" unemployed.

Palo Alto: Mike Kasperak, the first adult to undergo a heart transplant in America, died at Stanford Medical Center 14 days after receiving the heart of a woman. Doctors said Kasperak underwent "a fantastic galaxy of complications" and it was not his new heart that killed him.

Britain Staking Scientific Claim Beneath The Waves

By SCIENCE SERVICE

More than five and a half years ago, Britain joined the space club with a small ionosphere — measuring satellite named Ariel 1. Now that country has joined what is coming to be known as the "hydrospace club," with the development of its first underwater research vessel.

Called SURV, for Standard Underwater Research Vessel, the two-man craft was designed and built by Lintott Engineering Ltd. of Horsham, England, to aid seabed studies by geologists, marine biologists and fishery experts. It is also intended as a search-and-recovery vehicle.

SURV is reportedly capable of taking its crew down to the limits of the continental shelf. In sea trials run by the Royal Navy it reached a depth of 600 feet, the maximum possible in the Portland Harbor test site. The hull is stressed to withstand pressures down to 6,000 feet below sea level.

A pair of electrically driven propellers can be rotated through 100 degrees, to drive the craft in any direction at a speed of up to 2.5 knots. This means that in a 24-hour submersion, for which SURV has already been tested, it has a range of almost 70 miles.

The company-funded vessel cost about $50,000, paid for out of profits on Lintott's British and West German atomic energy work. Operating costs are estimated at about $120 an hour.

The six-ton vessel is roomy, as such craft go. Both crew members can walk around inside to look out of any of the ten 2.5-inch-thick portholes. Manipulating arms, seabed corers and sampling devices can be operated through the hull.

Still and movie cameras can be carried inside the hull and operated normally by the observers, or outside frames can be fitted for mounting external television lights or additional cameras.

Communication with the surface is by connecting telephone line, while an acoustic system provides underwater communication with divers up to a quarter-mile away.

The pressure hull is faired into a glass fiber shell which has been made to withstand as much punishment on the surface as a work boat. The forward part of the shell surrounds the top portion of the pressure hull and contains the surface bouyancy tanks.

The streamlined after section is compartmented for batteries and air bottles for bouyancy control. The batteries are kept at normal atmospheric pressure in five neutrally bouyant pods designed for easy changing, and, in the future, for recharging at sea.

The first customers for SURV are likely to be the British Gas Council, for inspection of natural gas pipelines on the floor of the North Sea, and the various American and British oil companies who are drilling in that area. The Ministry of Defense has also expressed keen interest.

"If it had been ready in time we would gladly have lent SURV to the Government at the time of the Torrey Canyon disaster," G. E. Gladwell, director of Lincott, said.

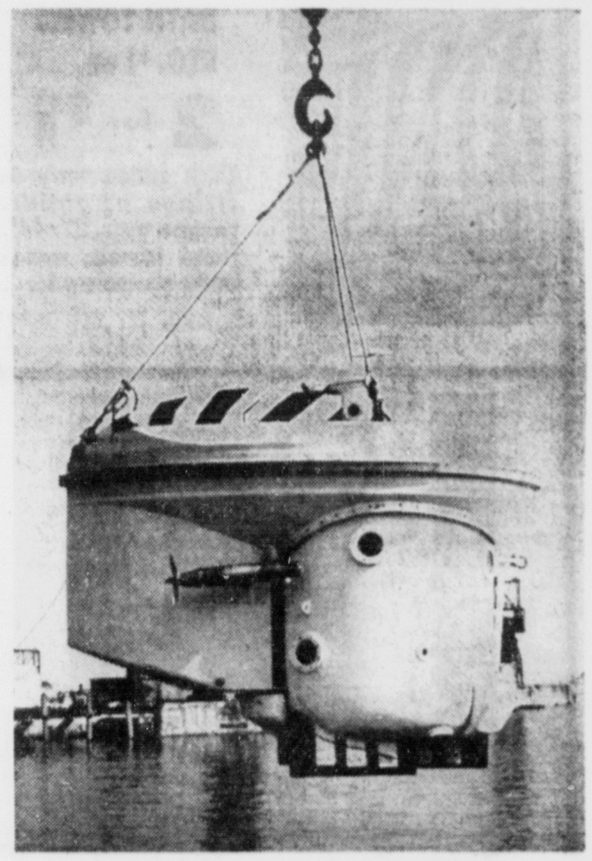
"It could have found out in a day what was causing the vast outpouring of oil from the giant tanker. Instead, the full truth is still not known. If there is a similar disaster in the future, we expect to have a reserve fleet standing by to carry out an immediate investigation."

There is no planned production figure for SURVs as yet, but Gladwell says that production models will be from five to eight times less costly than their U. S. counterparts. "We are planning to make SURVs on much the same lines as auto makers turn out their cars," he says. "A basic model with a variety of optional extras."

The British Government is naturally enthusiastic about getting into undersea research with British vehicles. In fact, although SURV is the only such craft the country yet has, the National Environmental Research Council is already considering the development of a multi-sub "tender," to act as mother ship to a flotilla of small submersibles.

The proposed design would cost more than $2.5 million, however, which could be quite an obstacle for the one-sub country, in view of its newly shrunk pound.

"We would like it to be capable of conversion into an ordinary research ship which could go on long voyages," says Council secretary R. J. H. Beverton. "But at the start it would be confined to home waters where we have an extended plan, now that a really serviceable undersea research vehicle is available, to pay more attention to coastal erosion and preservation of wild life, exploitation of mineral wealth, and the effects of pollution of fresh water systems."



DOWN TO THE SEA — The Standard Undersea Research Vessel — designed to be built in quantity like automobiles — is Britain's newest venture to regain some of her sea rule back again, but this time it is all beneath the waves. (Science Service photo)

THE SACRAMENTO SCENE

Legislature Is Showing Signs Of Concentrating On Business

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — The California Legislature, which normally starts its session at a leisurely pace and then slows down, is showing some signs of beginning its work of the year.

Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh, D-Inglewood, asked the members to ask for waiving of the rule which prohibits a bill from being heard in committee until 30 days after its introduction. He said bills shouldn't be heard in less than two weeks after introduction and should have at least one week's notice of the hearing.

The leadership of the two houses announced a tentative schedule which called for the Legislature to be in session on both Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays, take an Easter recess from about April 5-15, and recess on May 17 for the primary election.

Hope was expressed that all of the major work of the session, other than adoption of a budget and big appropriation bills could be accomplished before the mid-May recess. There were few, however, who felt this actually could come about.

Four political parties will be on the November election ballot this year, Secretary of State Frank M. Jordan announced.

Both the American Independent party (George Wallace) and the Peace and Freedom party (get out of Vietnam) easily qualified for a spot on the ballot. Both parties gained registration in excess of 100,000 voters, with only about 66,000 needed for qualification.

Meanwhile, Jordan announced registration in January was 7,182,951, a drop of 1,157,917 since the November, 1966, election. Democrats numbered 3,829,243, down 18.9 per cent from 1966, while while the Republican registration totaled 2,934,061, a drop of 12.4 per cent.

A week of partisanship was kicked off on last Sunday by a "report to the people" type of television appearance by Unruh.

Without mentioning him by name, Unruh charged Gov. Ronald Reagan with "poor-mouthing" the state and failing to propose any solutions to the problems "because he has been too busy downgrading our state, or traveling to other states in an effort to spread his message of gloom and doom, despair and division.

Reagan said he didn't believe he had traveled more than any other governor. Asked if he considered Unruh a statewide candidate or if he had any TV tips for the speaker, Reagan said "We will just wait and see if the series sells."

Following Unruh's speech, two Republican leaders, Assemblymen Robert T. Monagan, Tracy, and Don Mulford, Piedmont, delivered a "red ink" paper to show that the state's financial ills and tax increases were carried over from the former administration as part of the Unruh-Brown plan. They said taxes would have had to be raised another $130 million a year if Gov. Edmund G. Brown had remained in office.

Assemblyman George N. Zenovich, D-Fresno, the Democratic floorleader in the house, said it was clear to him that the Reagan rat-pack in the Legislature has been ordered to embark on a 'get-Unruh' campaign, regardless of the cost."

The normally non-partisan Senata wasn't in much better shape.

The Democrats, with the help of a couple of Republicans, pushed through a number of rules changes designed to strengthen the power of the rules committee. However, a move to split the judiciary committee into two seven-man groups failed.

There was bitterness among the Republicans with the defectors. The rules committee was about to announce selection of committee members and chairmen for the year, in which several Republicans were reported in line for demotions.

Bad news from Washington came on two fronts during the week, under the President's plan to cut expenditures.

Gordon C. Luce, transportation agency administrator, said the decision to withhold $600 million in federal highway funds probably would delay about $60 million in funds for highways in California.

Luce said the delay will hit where it hurts most as the traffic fatality rate has been dropping because of new freeway construction. The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation will defer $8,494,000 in California projects as part of the economy drive. It would mean a delay in the start of construction of the Auburn Dam project, Folsom south canal, a fish facility on the Tehama-Colusa canal and parts of other projects.

AT DRAKE HIGH SCHOOL

Adult Education Program Has Something For Every Marinite

By DEBBIE FIALKOWSKI

People who have long thought their formal education finished are, more and more, discovering that they can still pursue their special interests through the adult education programs of their schools.

Typical are the classes at Sir Francis Drake High School in San Anselmo, which seem to offer something for everyone.

Enrolled, along with those still working toward a high school diploma or seeking to qualify for United States citizenship, are many who attend night school simply to broaden their educational backgrounds, or to learn a new and practical skill.

VARIETY, says Mrs. Evelyn Leedy, dean of adult education at Drake, is a particular emphasis of the program.

"We feel a new class can and should come into being anytime enough people indicate an interest," she says. "Through such new, even unusual classes, we are fulfilling our obligation to meet the ever-changing needs of the community."

This philosophy is clearly reflected in the new classes being offered at Drake this winter quarter.

UPHOLSTERY, with Lou Camredon as instructor, is designed to teach the fundamental principles of this craft skill in which more and more Marin householders have demonstrated an interest.

For Marin's many creative adults, Helen Burmester teaches a class in needlecraft on Tuesday nights. Decorative stitches are taught as well as the use of various materials as a means of self expression. A new approach to mecrame or square-knotting is yet another feature.

In addition to its beginning French and Spanish language courses, Drake has added conversational German, taught also by Mrs. Burmester on Thursdays. Language laboratory facilities at the school are used.

Night School Classes Put Stress On Variety

A CLASS exclusively Drake's is "The Psychology of Personal Awareness." Taught by Keith Lester the students are provided with an experimental framework within which they examine personal and interpersonal relationships. For instance, the common techniques by which people mask and conceal their feelings, and their impact, are examined.

"Drug Use and Abuse" represents the first "family class" to be offered in the Tamalpais Union High School District. Dr. Sanford Feinglass is lecturer and coordinator. A fee of $4 a family is charged for the semester series of four lectures. Teen-agers are encouraged to attend with their parents.

For those whose interests don't fall into any of these broad categories, there are also classes in public speaking, men's conditioning and weight-lifting, physical fitness for women, horticulture, bookkeeping, tailoring, jewelry-making, woodshop, piano, and — underwater safety.

ALL THESE classes, which began earlier this month, are non-credit courses. With some exceptions, a $4 fee is charged for most classes. Students under 21 are exempt from registration fees.

But whether you are 21, 42, or 63, or even 84, be you homemaker or skindiver, says Mrs. Leedy, you are apt to find something of interest — and benefit — to you in the modern adult evening education program.

FOREIGN LANGUAGES continue to be one of the staples of the Drake High School adult education curriculum. Michael Lopez, instructor, conducts a class in Spanish through a grammar exercise.

Marin's Key Role In History

By FLORENCE DONNELLY
Independent-Journal Historian

Marin County had a decisive and sometimes tragic role in the events that led to the change in California's status from Mexican to United States sovereignty.

It was the scene of the only battle of the Bear Flag War.

And it was the locale of the murder by the Americans of three peaceful and unarmed Californians. Relatives of that bereaved family are still residents of this county.

The year 1846 brought drastic changes for the people of California.

MARIN COUNTY was then a land of immense ranches and of plenty, part of a vast area governed by famed Gen. Mariano G. Vallejo of Sonoma. Into this peaceful picture strode a colorful but ominous figure in John Charles Fremont, handsome, imperious and ambitious.

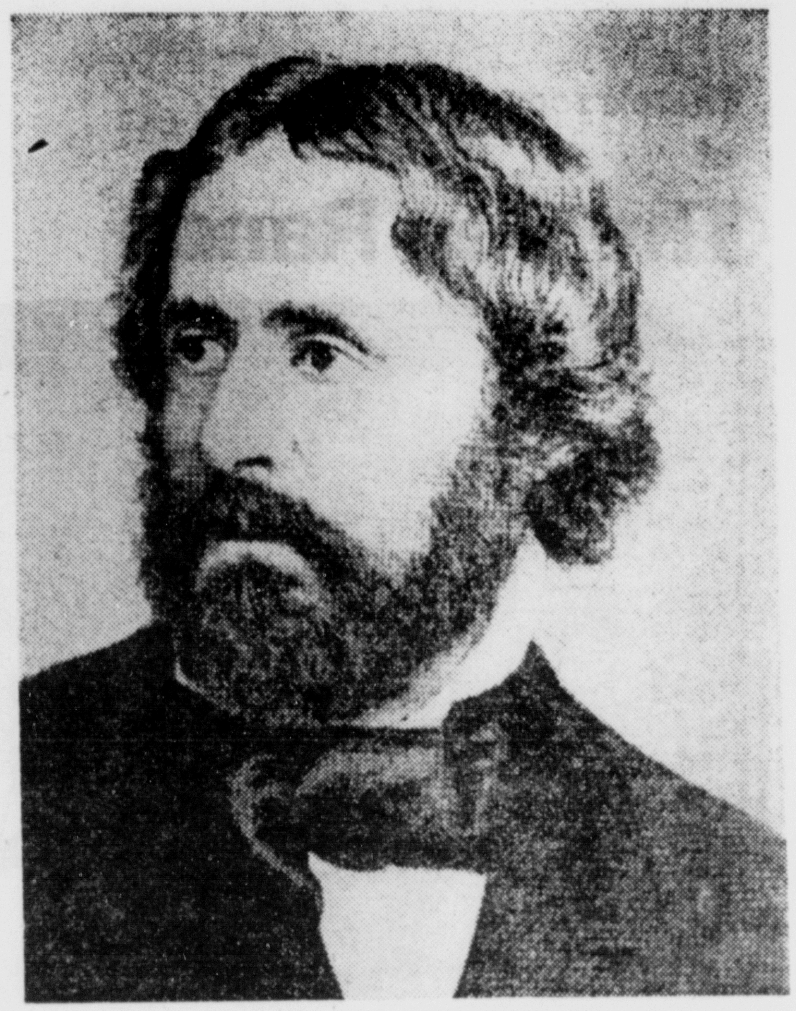
He arrived that spring in California with a party of men, ostensibly for the purpose of surveying a shorter route to the Pacific Coast for the United States government.

General Vallejo granted him permission to rest his men in the San Joaquin Valley before continuing on to Oregon. But the arrogant Fremont marched his party into San Jose, where he insulted the alcalde and created other trouble.

HISTORIAN Hubert Howe Bancroft tells how Fremont was ordered to leave California, but instead established a fortified position on Gavilan Peak and raised the U. S. Flag. On advice of the American consul in Monterey, Thomas O. Larkin, however, Fremont thought better of his bravado and withdrew in the night.

Later Fremont was to claim that as they moved northward his men were attacked without provocation by forces under Mexico's Gen. Jose Castro. This version Bancroft dismissed as "pure fiction."

At Lake Klamath on May 7, 1846, Fremont received from Lt. Archibald Gillespie letters from Washington D.C. which the former claimed to have interpreted as notification that a state of war existed between the U.S. and Mexico.



THESE TWO PRINCIPALS in the dramatic struggle for California were men of remarkably different temperaments. Gen. Mariano Vallejo, left, of Sonoma was the Mexican government's representative, in charge of the area to the north of San Francisco. He was a quiet, dignified, gentlemanly aristocrat. His antagonist, John C. Fremont, right, the American officer, was an ambitious firebrand, impetuous and ruthless.

ANYWAY, Fremont moved south again to establish a camp near Marysville. Here he called for and received recruits from Americans and their sympathizers. Keeping himself in the background, he began planning the strategy to be carried out by a small select force based upon first provoking the Mexican-Californians by making prisoners of some of their most prominent men including General Vallejo.

Sonoma, the seat of government, was unprotected in 1846, General Vallejo having dismissed the garrison because the Mexican government was unable to pay for its maintenance.

On June 14, 1846, Vallejo awoke to find his house surrounded by armed men, some of them American settlers, but most of them recent immigrants or transient hunters.

INVITED inside the hacienda, the Americans informed the general he was their prisoner. When his brother, Capt. Salvador Vallejo, and Lt. Col. Victor Prudon arrived, they, too, were placed under arrest.

With Vallejo's brother-in-law, Jacob P. Leese, acting as interpreter, Vallejo agreed to capitulate with the understanding the arrested officers would be released on parole. Not all the invaders, however, would live up to this agreement, and the three prisoners were taken, instead, to Fremont's camp.

There Fremont sanctimoniously denied any involvement, claiming the three were captives of oppressed people driven to rebellion. He had them sent on to Sutter's Fort.

BACK AT Sonoma, the Mexican flag was torn from the staff. Since the Americans had no authority to run up the U.S. Flag, they raised a Bear Flag instead. William B. Ide, chosen their captain, read a grandiose proclamation that cited claimed oppression of American settlers. He promised reforms — promises which, Bancroft says, were never realized.

General Castro, Fremont's old foe, declared war on the insurgents, who were growing in number, and raised a pitifully small force to oppose them.

When two members of the Bear Flag party, William Fowler and Thomas Gowie, were sent to Sonoma to the Fitch Ranch near what is today Healdsburg, to get a keg of powder, they fell into the hands of a gang of Californians, and were eventually slain.

BANCROFT offers the theory that the two men were either killed attempting to escape, or murdered by an individual desperado among their captors.

The result, however, was a strengthening of the insurgent cause.

Two other Americans had fallen into the hands of the Mexican-Californians. Lt. Henry L. Ford formed a rescue party, leaving Sonoma on June 23, 1846.

Destroying some muskets at one house and capturing four Mexicans at another, Ford reached Rancho Olompali in North Marin with 14 men. Near Camilo Ynita's adobe house, the lieutenant made out a number of horses in a corral, but only a few men. He was unaware that the original enemy force of 25 men had been reinforced by another 50 under Joaquin de la Torre that very morning.

FORD FORMED his men into two platoons and ordered a charge upon Olompali to win fresh mounts. To his surprise, men came pouring from the house and from under the trees. Ford then ordered his men to dismount and take cover among the trees.

The Californians, armed with muskets and lances, mounted their horses and charged. The Americans met them with heavy fire.

The Californians withdrew to a position on a hill, out of effective range. There was some more firing on both sides, then the Californians withdrew.

There have been differing versions of the results of the conflict given. De la Torre's casualties are usually listed as one (Manuel Cantus) killed and at least two wounded. But Ford later insisted that "by going to Camillo Rancho you will now find the graves of the eight men who were buried where they fell."

The Californians rode to Saucelito where they commandeered a boat belonging to Capt. William A. Richardson and crossed the bay at San Pablo. They rejoined Castro's forces and marched to Santa Clara.

FREMONT HAD remained at his camp. Learning of Ford's encounter with the Californians and also that Ide's leadership at Sonoma was not meeting with the approval of the men there, he now broke camp and took his forces to Sonoma, arriving June 25.

James W. Marshall described Fremont's party thus:

"There were Americans, French, English, Swiss, Poles, Russians, Prussians, Chilians, Germans, Greeks, Austrians, Pawnees, native Indians . . . Some wore relics of their homespun garments, some relied on the antelope and bear for their wardrobe, some were

"How Did My Cleaner Wrinkle My Silk Dress?"

You will notice that only one panel of your dress is wrinkled. The wrinkle does not cross the seam. This is evidence of what is termed a "mill wrinkle." Mill wrinkles are not the fault of your drycleaner. They are put in a fabric in the mill. If the dyeing bath gets too hot or if the fabric lays in one position too long, mill wrinkles develop.

When a mill wrinkled fabric goes to the mill's finishing department, high temperatures and pressure can often finish the fabric so that it is perfectly smooth. It is sold, cut and made up into garments.

The first time such a fabric is drycleaned the wrinkles return. Your drycleaner may be able to apply a wet sizing to the wrinkled area and "hide" the wrinkles, but they will reappear when your dress is cleaned again.

It is regrettable that you are the victim of a "mill wrinkle" but that is caused at the mill, not by the dress manufacturer nor the cleaners.

lightly habited in buckskin leggins and a coat of warpaint, and their weapons were equally various. There was the grim old hunter with his long, heavy rifle, and the farmer with his double-barreled shotgun, the Indian with his bow and arrows, and others with horsepistols, revolvers, sabers, ship cutlasses, bowie knives and pepper boxes (Allen's revolvers) . . . "

ON JUNE 26, Fremont and his men, augmented by a force of 125 including Ford and Semple, came to San Rafael and "took" the deserted Mission San Rafael Arcangel.

The mission was ransacked. Official papers, which included many Mexican documents, were taken. The simple chapel where the dedicated Franciscans had conducted religious services was desecrated.

Then, on June 28, 1846, came an act that horrified all Californians and many Americans. Jasper O'Farrell, the pioneer surveyor, gave an account of the event that was published in the Los Angeles Star of Sept. 27, 1856.

O'FARRELL wrote: "I was at San Rafael in June of 1846 when the then Captain Fremont arrived at that mission with his troops. There a boat landed three men at the mouth of the estero at Point San Pedro. As soon as they were described by Fremont, there were three men (Kit Carson was one) detailed to meet them.

"They mounted their horses and after advancing about 100 yards halted, and Carson returned to where Fremont was standing on the corridor of the mission with Gillespie, myself, and others, and said: 'Captain, shall I take these men prisoners?'

In response Fremont waved his hand and said: 'I have no room for prisoners.'

"THEN THEY advanced to within 50 yards of the three unfortunate and unarmed Californians, alighted from their horses and deliberately shot them. One was an old and respected Californian, Dow Jose R. Berreyesa (sometimes spelled differently), whose son was the alcalde at Sonoma. The other two were twin brothers and sons of Don Francisco de Haro, a citizen of the Pueblo of Yerba Buena.

"I saw Carson some two years ago and spoke to him of this act and he assured me that then and since he regretted to be compelled to shoot these men, but that Fremont was bloodthirsty enough to order otherwise, and he further remarked it was not the only brutal act he was compelled to commit while under his command."

Concluded the surveyor: " . . . I must say I feel degraded in soiling paper with the name of a man, whom, for that act, I must always look upon with contempt and consider as murderer and a coward."

ZOETH ELDREDGE in Volume II of his "The Beginnings of San Francisco" also wrote of the killing of the 19-year-old twins, Ramon and Francisco de Haro, and their uncle.

He quoted from O'Farrell's letter and from a letter written by Jose de los Santos Berreyesa, son of the murdered don, as well, and noted that "from the fact that the records of this testimony have become so scarce, it would seem as if some one had attempted to destroy them."

San Rafael Slayings: A Dark Chapter In California History

ficial Philip A. Roach, he quoted:

"IN REPLY to your question whether it is certain or not that Col. Fremont consented or permitted his soldiers to commit any crime or outrage on the frontier of Sonoma or San Rafael in the year 1846 . . . I believe it will be sufficient to inform you of the following case:

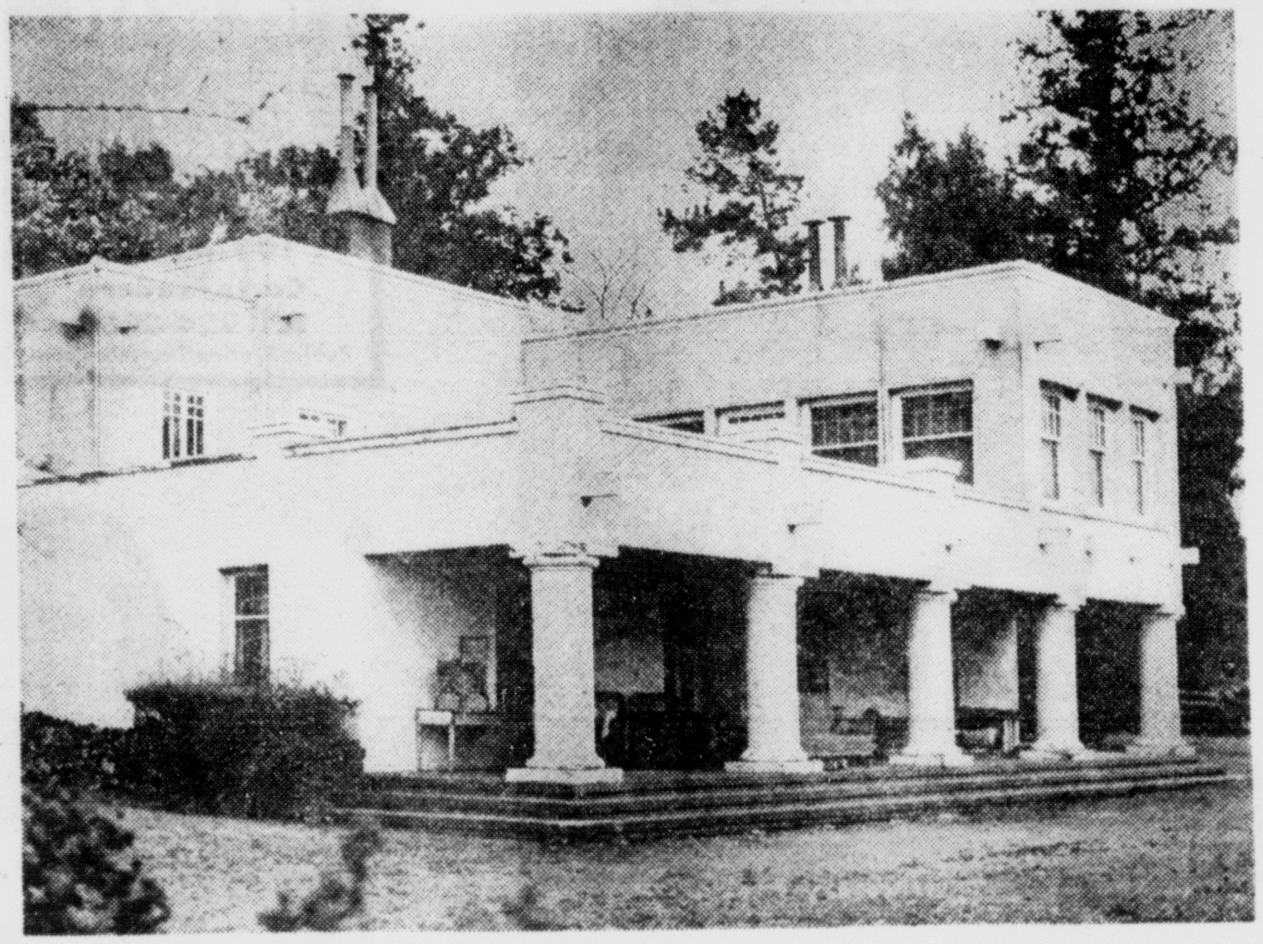
"Occupying the office of first alcalde of Sonoma in the year 1846, having been taken by surprise and put in prison in said town with several of my countrymen, Col. Fremont arrived in Sonoma with his forces from Sacramento.

"He came . . . to the room in which I was confined, and having required the tranquility of my jurisdiction, I answered him that I did not wish to take part in any matters in the neighborhood, as I was a prisoner. After some further remarks he retired, not well satisfied with the tenor of my replies.

"ON THE following day, accompanied by soldiers, he went to San Rafael.

"At that time the news of my arrest had reached my parents. At thei nsistence of my mother, that my father should go to Sonoma to see the conditions in which myself and brothers were placed, the pacific old man left Santa Clara for San Pablo . . . accompanied by two young cousins, Francisco and Ramon (de) Haro and having disembarked near San Rafael, they proceeded toward the mission of that name with the intention of getting horses . . .

"Unfortunately, Col. Fremont was walking in the corridor of the mission with some of his soldiers and they perceived the three Californians. They took their arms and mounted — approached toward them and fired. It is perhaps true that they were scarcely dead when they were stripped of their clothing, which was all they had on their person; others say that Col. Fremont was asked whether they should be taken prisoners or killed, and that he replied he had no room for prisoners and, in consequence of this, they were slain.



INSIDE THIS MANSION of 26 rooms, constructed in 1915, are the adobe walls of the Indian-built Rancho Olompali structure that was the first of its kind north of San Francisco Bay, dating back to the 18th Century. The rancho was also the site of the only battle of the Bear Flag War. (Independent-Journal photo)

"ON THE day following the event, Fremont returned to Sonoma and I learned from one of the Americans who accompanied him . . . that one of the persons killed in San Rafael was my father. I sought the first opportunity to question him (Fremont) about the matter and whilst he was standing in front of the room in which I was a prisoner, I and my two brothers spoke to him and questioned who it was who killed our father. He answered that it was not certain he was killed, but that it was a Mr. Castro.

"Shortly afterwards, a soldier passed by with a serape belonging to my father and one of my brothers pointed him out.

"After being satisfied of this fact I requested Col. Fremont to be called and told him that from seeing the serape on one of his men I believed my father had been killed by his orders, and I begged that he would do me the favor to have the article restored to me so that I might give it to my mother. To this Col. Fremont replied he could not order its restoration as the serape belonged to the soldier who had it and then he retired without giving me any further reply."

LATER THE younger Berreyesa succeeded in purchasing his father's serape from the soldier for $25.

According to some reports, the bodies of the three victims lay naked in the broiling sun until dark when kind hands removed them.

The late historian Belle C. Brown said that the three men were shot and killed in what is now downtown San Rafael south of Fourth Street, and that for years a cross marked the site of the tragedy and flowers were placed often at its base.

Fremont and his men returned to Sonoma to receive a welcome as heroes. The Fourth of July was celebrated with the firing of cannon and the reading of the Declaration of Independence. Fremont formally assumed command.

Bancroft offered this comment: "He (Fremont) meanly assumed for himself credit for the Bears' warlike acts in which he took no active part."

THE BEAR Flag Republic was short-lived.

News arrived that United States troops were fighting Mexican forces in Texas and Mexico. Commodore Sloat at once sailed on his ship, the Savannah, to Monterey where two of his ships were already stationed. There Consul Thomas Larkin told him of the Bear Flag revolt.

Sloat raised the U.S. Flag over the Custom House at Monterey on July 7, 1846. The next morning Montgomery flew the Stars and Stripes in Yerba Buena, then sent Lt. Joseph Warren Revere in a ship's launch to Sonoma. Revere assembled the Bears and all other in Sonoma and explained the change of affairs. Then he lowered the Bear Flag and raised Old Glory on the pole in the plaza.

THIS ACT was cheered lustily by some, but regarded less joyously by other insurgents who had dreamed of a republic independent of all other powers.

Although the California Republic had come to an end, General Vallejo and the other prisoners were held at Sutter's Fort for another month, confined together in a single room alive with fleas and other vermin. Their food was scanty and miserable, and they were not allowed to communicate with their families.

It was through the efforts of Consul Larkin and Montgomery that the ranking officer, Commodore Stockton, ordered the release of the prisoners. They were escorted to their homes where they found their estates had suffered great depredations, with horses and cattle gone and other harm done.

FREMONT AND his men had also raided the ranchos of Marin.

Fremont and Stockton carried on the warfare in California until it was concluded by the signing of the Treaty of Cahuenga on Jan. 13, 1847.

Fremont was proclaimed governor of California, receiving his commission from Stockton and beginning his term of office on Jan. 19, 1847. His tenure lasted only three months, when Gen. Stephen Walter Kearney replaced him as governor. There was a bitter feud between the two men.

KEARNY governed California until May 31, 1947. He reported to Washington D.C.:

"The Californians are quiet now and I shall endeavor to keep them so by mild and gentle treatment. Had they received such treatment from the time our flag was hoisted here in July I believe there would have been little or no resistance on their part. They have been most cruelly and shamefully abused by our own people . . . Had they not resisted, they would have been unworthy of the name of men. . . ."

It was to be some time before the war with Mexico was formally and finally ended. During this period, California had American military governors.

THE LAST military governor, Brig. Gen. Bennett Riley, issued a proclamation on June 3, 1849. He proposed an election of officials and asked the people to vote for a convention of delegates from every part of the territory to form a state constitution or territorial organization to be ratified by the people

Three Deaths That Shocked California

John C. Fremont Was Never Forgiven For Senseless Slayings

and submitted to Congress for approval.

On Aug. 1, the election was held. Delegates were to meet in Monterey.

THE NATIVE Californians were suspicious of the movement. They feared that because they were the large landholders, they would have the burden of supporting the government. Most of them had little love for the Americans because of their tragic experiences during the conquest. Then there was the language barrier. Most of the Californians spoke only Spanish.

However, the newcomers to the territory prevailed and the convention was held at Colton Hall with Robert Semple, he of the Bear Flag party, as president. A dentist and printer, Semple proved an able presiding officer.

Many issues had to be settled. One was whether California should have Negro slavery. It was a young Irishman, William E. Shannon, a lawyer, who made it "free."

BANCROFT wrote: "He introduced that section of the bill of rights that made California a free state." Shannon also proposed boundary lines for California that were similar to those adopted later.

The 48 delegates labored for nearly six weeks preparing the constitution that was signed Oct. 13, 1849.

SOUTHERNERS in Congress opposed the admission of California as a free state, but northern senators opposed the revision of California's proposed constitution.

It was not until Sept. 7, 1850, that the U.S. House of Representatives passed the bill admitting California, with all the Southerners voting against it. On Sept. 9, the act was finally approved, and two California senators, chosen at the time the constitution was ratified, were sworn in. One was John C. Fremont, but he had drawn the short term, and his stay in the Senate was brief.

Californians remained in a state of anxiety because of lack of speedy communication. Finally, on Oct. 18, 1850, the Oregom, arriving from Panama, brought the news that California had been admitted to the Union. Riders then carried newspapers (selling for $5 a copy) into the remote areas, and the celebration lasted for many days.

MARIN WAS one of the 27 original counties of California. San Rafael was an unofficial county seat until an election in 1863 made the designation official.

During the military occupation of California and for years after statehood, land-grant holders faced the threat of the loss of their estates. The grants now had to be approved by the U.S. Land Commission. Squatters came, false claims were made. Some grantees lost their land, and lawyers fattened on the legal fees others were forced to pay to hold their estates.

But back to Fremont, the man Californians never forgave for the senseless murders of three innocent men:

FROM A former Mexican governor, he bought in 1846 his famous Mariposa estate which Bancroft said "now bade fair to making him the richest man in America."

Edward Besqui, in his memoirs, told of visiting the Mariposa estate upon which were several gold mines. He said Fremont was at that time (1852) in the prime of life, "dignified, yet genial and courteous." He added: "Mrs. Fremont was a highly accomplished woman of fine intellect with a towering ambition and courage equal to her husband's."

Fremont had influential friends in the East as well as on the West Coast, including a number of bankers. When the Republican Party sought a candidate for the 1956 presidential election, these men heartily endorsed Fremont. His supporters believed that his fame as the "Great Pathfinder" and "Conqueror of California" would bring him votes. He was nominated to oppose James Buchanan, Democrat, and Millard Fillmore of the American Party.

IT WAS then that Fremont's past was brought into the limelight. Letters of Californians detailing Fremont's ruthless acts in the West were circulated.

Letters to newspapers spoke of "Fremont's grasshopper charge on San Rafael," ridiculing his much-publicized capture of the Mission San Rafael Arcangel. It was noted that Fremont and his rag-tag "army" had galloped into San Rafael to capture Joaquin de la Torre, but had found the elusive Californians gone, so that all the Fremonters accomplished was to disturb the swarms of grasshoppers feasting on the wild mustard growing around the mission.

Buchanan won the presidential election handily.

AFTER HIS defeat, Fremont lived a year or two in California, devoting himself, according to Bancroft, "to grand schemes of speculation in connection with railroads."

Then, Bancroft added: "In 1878 he was reduced to extreme poverty and was appointed governor of Arizona." He subsequently resumed his speculating.

In 1885, according to Bancroft, the Fremonts were living in New York City. And in 1890 the controversial figure in American history died.

Long after Fremont departed the California scene, his mention brought intense reaction from many of its residents. The De Haro and Berreyesa families have not harbored any of that bitterness, but retain a justifiable pride in their ancestry.

DON FRANCISCO de Haro married Josefa, daughter of Jose Antonio Sanchez, commandante of the San Francisco Presidio. They had a large family including a number of beautiful daughters as well as the two sons slain in San Rafael. Don Francisco had bought in 1837 the Rancho Laguna de la Merced, covering parts of what became San Francisco and San Mateo counties. He was Yerba Buena or San Francisco's first alcalde, elected in 1834 and again in 1838.

Daughter Natividad was especially renowned for her beauty. She was first married to Ignacio Castro, and after his death, to Paul Tissot, member of an aristocratic French family.

A. Richard Tissot of San Rafael is a direct descendant.

IN KENT Woodlands lives Frank Abbott III, another direct descendant of Don Francisco de Haro. The Abbotts' daughter, Susan de Haro Abbott, is the three-times great granddaughter of Don Francisco. She was chosen La Favorita in 1967 to preside over San Francisco's 190th birthday party. The Abbotts have another daughter, Katherine Mercedes Abbott.

The uncle of the De Haro twins, who shared their fate, was a member of a distinguished California family and received the San Vicente Rancho in what is now Santa Clara County. His wife was the former Maria Bernal and he was the son of Nicholas Berreyesa and the former Gertrudis Peralta.

Two sons of Alcalde de Haro, and brothers of Mrs. Tissot, came to a tragic end. They were the famous De Haro twins, Francisco and Ramon, who were shot by Fremont's men at San Rafael in June, 1846. The De Haro boys set out with their uncle, Don Jose de los Reyes Berryessa of San Jose, to rescue their cousin, young Berryessa, who was alcalde of Sonoma, and who had been thrown into jail by Fremont's men. At San Rafael they met Kit Carson.

SHOOTING OF TWINS

Kit Carson saw the approach of Berryessa and his nephews, the De Haro boys. He asked Fremont what should be done with the Californians. Fremont answered that he had no room for prisoners, and so Carson and his men shot them.

Berryessa and the De Haros were unarmed. When their bodies were found there was great indignation among Californians, shared by all American historians. Fremont never attempted to explain the matter, and his name was blackened greatly by the unprovoked murders.

A BLACK-BORDERED newspaper account that was circulated throughout California gave horrified Californians the details of how three of their most respected members had been slain in San Rafael at the instigation of John C. Fremont. The copy belongs to A. Richard Tissot, a De Haro descendant.

PATIENT Lorraine Slocum at Ross General Hospital beamed her approval of this painting shown here by Mrs. Oliver Goodbrod of the hospital volunteers. Entitled "Farm Near Bloomfield," it is by Nat Levy, a past president of the Marin Society of Artists, and one of some 50 paintings donated by society members to the hospital volunteers' Art a la Cart program.

FLORALS are a most popular addition to the decor of a hospital room or ward, adding a cheerful touch. This one, "Poppies," was painted by Betty Finsland of the Marin Society of Artists and donated to Ross General Hospital patients.

Paintings For The Art Cart

Marin Society Responds To Call At Ross

When the volunteers of Ross General Hospital inaugurated their Art a la Cart program to bring good original paintings into the rooms and wards for the patients at that institution, it proved to be an even greater success than had been anticipated.

One result was a request from patients in the hospital's tuberculosis unit, the Terrace, that the program be extended to their section as well.

But compliance meant that the Ross Hospital Volunteer Service first had to obtain the donation of additional paintings.

FOR HELP, the volunteers turned to the Marin Society of Artists.

Mary Bonner, who had just taken office as president of the society, proved to be a sympathetic, cooperative and enthusiastic listener.

The result was the contribution of some 50 paintings by members of the society — outright gifts to the volunteers for use in stocking their art cart at the hospital.

THE ARTISTS responded so generously, Mrs. Bonner says, because the project offered them the opportunity for a worthwhile community project — "the very purpose for which the society had originally organized."

While the paintings become the property of the volunteer group, it is with the stipulation that they never be sold, but be retained perpetually for the exclusive use of Ross General patients.

Now the Marin Society of Artists has undertaken yet another responsibility at the new hospital.

The organization has agreed to supply the needed 72 paintings, one for each bed, for the new rehabilitation unit that is currently going up.

PROVIDING one or more paintings on the original list of Marin Society of Artists donors to the tuberculosis unit were Mrs. Bonner, Ruth Alexander, Frank Bacher, Evelyn Baumgardner, Laura Devendorf, Betty Finsland, Jean Gaines, Sandy Gravitch, Catherine Hagen, Sydney Herschleb, Maria Kincaid, Jackie Koehler, Nat Levy, Pat Meyer, Julie McKenzie, Betty Mobley, Doris Morrison, Betty Jo Norton, Barbara Peirano, Adurey Pill, Ken Potter, Mae Ralston, Elizabeth Stetson, Zora Sweeney, Crescent Venuto and Carolyn Wolbert, all much respected names in Marin art circles.

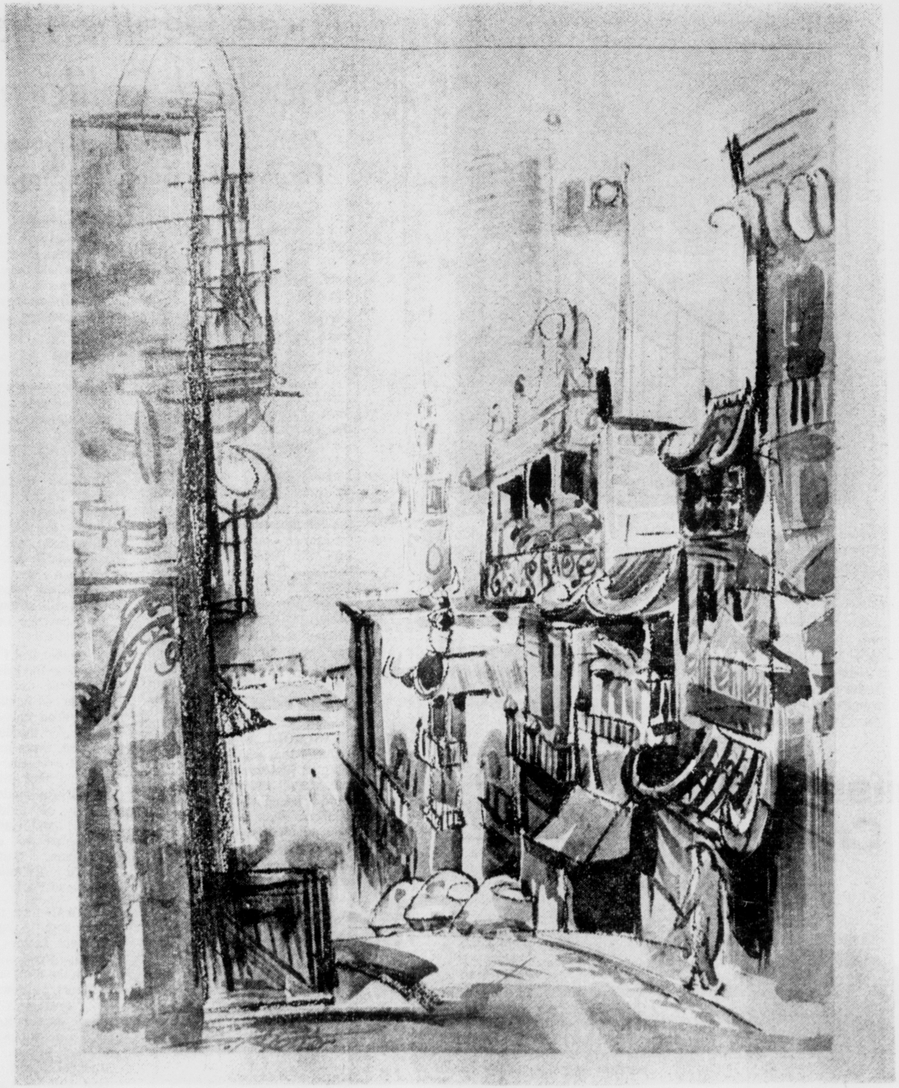
"JUST THE knowledge that these are original paintings adds a special touch of interest and pride of ownership for the patients," she adds.

The donations to date by the Marin society bring to more than 200 the number of paintings now available to Ross patients through the art cart service.

And soon that number will increase again as the Marin painters make yet more contributions of their creative work for the new rehabilitation unit, a program in which they feel their art will have a special positive impact upon the patients.



GAY, COLORFUL paintings on the wall are a most effective way of brightening a hospital room. Fitting the bill perfectly is this depiction of "Clay Street, Chinatown" by Ken Potter, currently one of Northern California's most popular painters and a Marin Society of Artists member. It brings the exotic color of this section of cosmopolitan San Francisco to the patient's bedside.

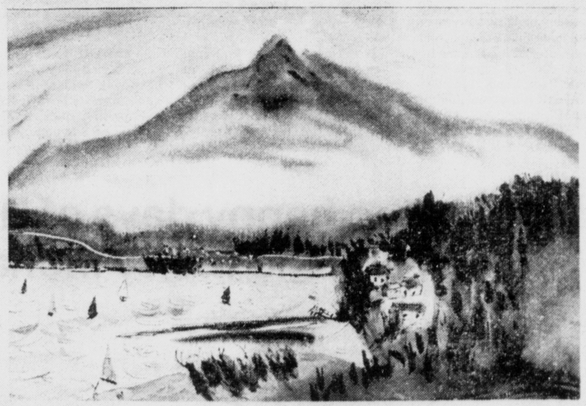
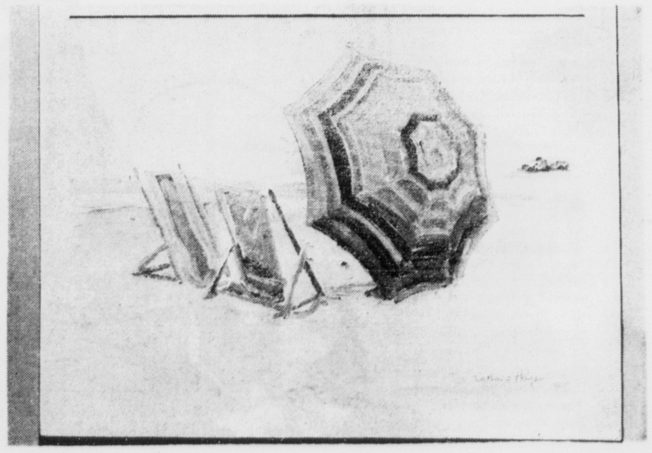
PATIENTS AT Marin General Hospital who might be yearning for the sight of such familiar landsmarks as the Golden Gate Bridge can satisfy that desire through several of the paintings donated by Marin Society of Artisis members. The painter of this one was Sanity Gravitch.



THE WATER and the mountain, both beloved sights to the Marin resident, are captured in this painting, "Sunday Sail," by Jean Gaines. It was one of some 50 paintings by Marin Society of Artists members contributed to the Ross General Hospital volunteers' Art a la Cart program.



CATHERINE HAGEN contributed this painting of a beach scene entitled "Malibu." Such donations made possible an expansion of the Ross General art program to its tuberculosis unit, the Terrace. Now further expansion to the new rehabilitation unit is planned.

City Of Neon And Sun

The Travel Pages

Las Vegas, the city drenched in neon, is a long-playing, fast-moving kaleidoscope of wall-to-wall fun and frenzy.

Each year, over 12 million visitors come to enjoy its cacophony of sights and sounds.

To many, "Las Vegas" is synonymous with "money." Drawn by the sensuous click-click of the roulette wheel or the green felt oasis of the crap table, the rich and the not-so-rich flock there to try their luck. Millions of dollars change hands daily. Fortunes or a week's wages may be made and lost in the flick of a croupier's wrist.

THE ONLY item noticeably lacking in the casino is a clock. All sense of time is lost. Night is turned into day, and day into night in a crazy confusion of marathon gambling.

The atmosphere is electric with the sight, sound, even the smell of money.

If and when the visitor tires of the gaming table, he can see Hollywood's top stars and opulent stage productions for the price of dinner or cocktails. This holds true any night of the year.

It's not unusual to see hotel marquees proclaiming such shows as "Folies Bergere," "Casino de Paris" and "Lido de Paris." At any time you might read such names as Mitzi Gaynor, Ella Fitzgerald, Dean Martin, Eddie Fisher, Carol Lawrence and Sammy Davis Jr.

IT TAKES a lot of daytime sun to compete with all the neon brilliance, but sunshine is one thing Las Vegas has in abundance, 99 out of very 100 days. It keeps a constant glisten on hundreds of king-sized resort hotel pools, making Las Vegas something of a sun worshiper's paradise.

And experts proclaim the area, for its size, to be the greatest concentration of championship golf courses in the world. There are seven to be exact.

It surprises many first-time arrivers to find out what an outdoor-type town Las Vegas really is. Like a center target, the city sits in the heart of a circle of outdoor wonders that includes Grand Canyon, Hoover Dam, Death Valley, Lake Mead, Bryce Canyon and Zion National Park.

Take Lake Mead, for example — a fisherman's lure loaded with bass, catfish, crappie and bluegill on a no-closed season basis. While on its surface water, more private boats, both power and sail, seem to show up every year.

THE VERDANT slopes of Mount Charleston are within sight of Las Vegas itself. In a half-hour or so, the visitor can climb several thousand feet above the desert floor over modern highways to pine-scented picnic country.

And who can pass up Hoover Dam, tallest and most-visited marvel of its type in the world? A trip inside the dam leaves one in awe of what man has done to harness nature for his own use.

Transportation has been a key to Las Vegas' success. Freeways and super-highways link the city with the other population centers of the West. By car, bus and rail, some 10 million visitors come to Las Vegas each year.

ANOTHER two million arrive by air. Las Vegas has been linked with the rest of the world by air since 1926 when Western Air Express (today Western Airlines) inaugurated service between Los Angeles, Las Vegas, and Salt Lake City, in a tiny open-cockpit Douglas M-2 biplane.

Today, a visit to Las Vegas means the clatter of the casinos, sumptuous meals, shapely showgirls, the deep draw of desert air, the sight from the nearby peak.

And for Northern Californians, the proximity of all this is yet another reason why they are drawn to "Vegas" by the thousands.

FOR THOSE who get their "kicks" from games of chance, the casinos of Las Vegas offer the excitement of gambling that continues day and night.

FROM THE RHINE River's famous Loreley Cliff, two visitors to Germany enjoy a panoramic vista. German Inns And Castles Offer A Strong Appeal For Americans

Americans who are accustomed to the impersonality of ordinary motels are in for a surprise in Germany where highway inns are often handsomely historic and gastronomically great.

Excellent roads thread Germany from the shady Black Forest to moated Muensterland, and with just a little planning, travelers can arrange to overnight in a succession of hostelries that are sightseeing attractions in themselves.

THE MEDIEVAL city of Goslar, for example, located in the Harz Mountains just two hours from Hanover, was founded in 922 and contains one of Northern Germany's leading hostelries, Der Achtermann. Built in 1501 in a thick-walled tower once used as a defense post, this historic castle offers one hundred rooms plus excellent food at inexpensive prices.

The town itself is an architectural history book. Half a dozen 12th Century churches, an 11th Century town hall, an ancient emperor's castle, guild homes and baroque mansions all recapture the past.

The town of Bad Godesberg, just south of Bonn, is one of the Rhineland's most popular resorts, with the distinguished 90-year-old Hotel zum Adler.

INTELLECTUAL and artistic life from nearby Bonn University plus ideal vacation facilities and surroundings make this stop a tourist must. Reservations should be made well in advance.

Seven miles north of Hofeismar, it is a veritable museum of old etchings, valuable paintings, suits of armor, weapons and antiques. It offers 14 rooms, modestly priced. The castle is secluded, the landscape richly scenic. Lord and owner Hans von Stockhausen personally sees to his guests' comfort.

Specialties are eel and trout from the nearby Diemel River.

IN KOCHEL, two hours from Munich by car, the Schmied von Kochel Hotel offers the weary traveler rest and relaxation in the Bavarian Alps. This attractive inn, with its warm, cozy rooms, is decorated with paintings and woodcarvings by local Bavarian artists, and features excellent service and cuisine.

Specialties are lake salmon and tangy pot roast.

The 18th Century Parkhotel Wehrle at Triberg in the Black Forest is a 50-room establishment that attracts gourmets the world over. The best Baden wines are served here. For tea addicts, the Wehrle's kitchen will prepare the brew according to recipes from many foreign countries.

AMONG THE famed specialties of the house are smoked Black Forest trout with horseradish, and apple baked in honey served with flaming kirsch.

Luebeck, on the Baltic coast, was once the pre-eminent town of the powerful Hanseatic League. Today, Luebeck supports a fine museum collection of traditional mementoes and antiques. Around this museum grew the Schabbelhaus Inn.

High beamed ceilings, 16th and 17th Century paintings and historic furnishings recapture the Old World elegance. It's just a short ride from Hamburg.

Another Stegner Writes

THE EDGE by Page Stegner; Dial Press, 250 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Barbara L. Cullen.

Continuing the literary tradition of his family, Page Stegner introduces his first novel, "The Edge." The title is symbolic of both theme and setting.

Set on the western periphery of the United States around San Francisco and the Bay Area, the story evolves out of the topography of the region. The sense of spacial freedom and power produced by the ocean and hills is coupled with the element of danger and mystery emitted by the untamed wilderness and sheer cliffs separating land from water.

Pitted against this natural scene is the City, bounded as any other city by the laws and mores of society, but less settled, less rooted in tradition than her eastern counterparts.

Ryan, the anti-hero or tragic figure of the novel, personifies the characteristics of this western coast. He is in limbo, on the brink of sanity or insanity, whichever you will, unable to cope with or accept the responsibilities delegated to an adult by our society. He cannot commit himself to the existing reality and would have you question the very credibility of such a reality.

Stegner creates Ryan's confused world with remarkable skill. Aware of the present but constantly flashing back upon the past, his mind is a mirror of anxiety and guilt. His reveries are like reruns of other scenes in other times starring someone other than himself.

Ryan becomes merely a spectator witnessing a bitter-sweet drama.

Stegner's scenic descriptions of California are equally as vibrant and illuminating as his treatment of Ryan. If Ryan never seems to be entirely in focus, the natural elements stand out sharply alive and beautiful.

Since Ryan cannot be considered the prototype of Modern Man or Western Man (Hippie would be the closest approximation) and possesses only attributes of weakness, he cannot be classified as either tragic or heroic — merely pitiable. Because he remains suspended in limbo throughout the novel, there is no resolution to his plight.

At best the novel remains a study of the tormented spirit, but that spirit never breaks through its barriers to either drop completely over the edge or pull itself safely back out of danger.

TED HUGHES

A Voice For The Mute

Ted Hughes speaks for mute growing things and finds his meaning in "Thistles," "Fern," "The Howling of Wolves." His is a solitary voice, alone in echoing corridors.

"Wodwo" is a weave of poems, stories, a play and more poems.

"They are intended to be read together as parts of a single work." . . . That is, if you wish, like Hughes, to pursue the meaning of Hughes. However, if you enjoy literature for its own sake, then you may sample poems such as "Ghost Crabs" for intimacies of the mystery of life, or "Boom" for a glimpse into the mind of our time.

His stories move slowly, elaborating upon or building toward bizarre circumstances. Read one after the other they can be tedious and even oppressive, so melancholy is his tone, and so sharp his solitude. In "Snow" the protagonist is literally alone, without even benefit of memory in an alien world. Assuming he has crash-landed he treks onward on sheer willpower.

In the play, "The Wound," we plod with the hero through a world between life and death. That world is gradually unraveled until we realize where we have been.

Hughes' vision may be compared to St. Exupery's in "Sand Wind and Stars." Whereas Hughes' wilderness howls, St. Exupery's sings.

I prefer song, but this is a howling time, the time of Camus' prophecy, with each in his solitary cell. Yet, from time to time, Hughes soars, as in "Gnat-Psalm":

"Dancing/Dancing/Writing on the air, rubbing out everything they write/Jerking their letters into knots, into tangles/Everybody everybody else's yoyo/ . . ."

Some Controversial Theorizing On Man And His Genetic Legacy

THE NAKED APE, A Zoological Study of the Human Animal, by Desmond Morris; McGraw-Hill, 252 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Jeff Greer.

"The Naked Ape" will probably be the most controversial — and perhaps most important — non-fiction book of 1968.

Its author, English zoologist Desmond Morris, has vaulted above the zoo, laboratory and educational TV script backgrounds of his earlier books. Here he not only reports to the layman, he presents a most provoking philosophy, or a put-on, depending on the capacities of the reader.

In brief, Morris' message is:

Man is simply an animal — the naked ape.

For all his thoughts and visions, for all his science and artifice, man still fears, exults, eats, procreates, fights and nests the way he does because he inherited his ways from an ancestor who was an adventurous ape.

Much of man's genetic legacy evolved when that primate left the friendly forest to change from a sort of arboreal grazer to a hunting competitor of the wolves and big cats that ruled the open lands.

Unless man heeds his biological legacy, Morris warns, he faces self-extermination, despite all his leaping for the stars.

DESMOND MORRIS
Provocative philosophy

Here let me warn the tender-minded reader that portions of the book are NOT for reading aloud, except in the most enlightened families.

It contains the most explicit, complete description of the human sex act we have ever seen written for laymen.

Throughout "The Naked Ape," Morris brilliantly seizes on common social habits to trace them back to their hunting pack or even earlier jungle origins. The reader gets delightful new looks at such actions as smiling at your fellow elevator passenger, shaking hands, dancing — and wearing lipstick.

Man's monogamous ways Morris attributes to a time when the monkey tribe's tyrant had to turn hunter, leaving his harem but persuading the tribe's other males to come along with him. Racial survival hinged on development of monogamous pairing, with the male feeding his female and with her rearing the young.

To copper the bets for the pair-bond's lasting, the naked ape evolved the most elaborate sexual characteristics of any primate. Man may have the largest brain of the primate tribe — but he-she also has the largest mammary glands and the largest penis of any primate, Morris declares.

Such thinking may shock some readers more than his explanations of man's social cooperation, feeding, hunting and mating characteristics in terms of animal inheritance.

"The Naked Ape" offers something for everyone who enjoys more than comic strip reading.

Only 40 years old, Morris has been a brilliant animal behavior student at Oxford, curator of mammals for the Royal Zoological Society, creator of an educational television series, and, most recently, director of a British foundation for advancement of the arts.

His books have grown with him. In "The Naked Ape," Morris is one of the potentially great men-who-can-make-men-think of the decade.

Morris' sprightly clear style and cleverly barbed points will amuse many, cause some to itch in new places, and may even make a scant few do some constructive scratching that might help save man from himself.

But it will have to be in some natural, animal way.

Two Civilizations In Review

THE MAYA WORLD, by Elizabeth P. Benson; Crowell, 172 pages, $6.95.

ARCHAEOLOGICAL DISCOVERIES IN THE HOLY LAND compiled by the Archaeological Institute of America; Crowell, 220 pages, $12.50. Reviewed by Jeff Greer.

It's instructive to read these two volumes together, although they weren't edited as a pair.

One provides a sweeping review of what's known about the Mayan civilization that grew to be the glory of Mesoamerica, then withered without leaving any lasting impact on today's Western culture — except books that can't yet be read. The other is a series of brief reports on various digs in the land whence came the Western world's most influential single book, the Bible.

Pre-Columbian Indian expert Miss Benson may have been a Wellesley coed and all that, but she broke her fingernails and defied the bugs of Yucatan to gain first-hand knowledge of the Maya. She's now curator of the famed Pre-Columbian Collection at Dumbarton Oaks.

"The Maya World" not only tells about (and depicts with excellent photos, maps and drawings) what is known and what is speculated about a culture that vanished centuries before Cortez invaded Mexico, but it also describes the area today — even to the point of travel tips to would-be tourists.

Nearly two dozen author-scientists contributed to the brilliantly illustrated work on the Holy Land. Arranged in more or less chronological order beginning with digs of ruins 9,000 years old, the volume uncovers pre-Biblical, Biblical and later relics of forgotten history through the Crusades.

The world-wide interest in Holy Land discoveries is reflected by the list of authors' names, from German-born Hebrew University Prof. Yahonian Aharoni, Italian antiquarian Emmanuel Anati and Californian Frank M. Cross Jr., through Jerusalem-born Yigael Yadin.

The detective-thriller story of the Dead Sea Scrolls is told by the men who used soldiers to outwit the native pillagers of the secret caves; the story of Masada, an anti-Herodic zealot fortress wiped out by the Romans, is recreated in a fashion that would make great fodder for a Wagnerian opera.

The Maya book impresses this reader more with the puzzles it poses than anything else; the Holy Land work leaves a strange emotion of wonder that what always seemed to be Biblical folk-tales had flesh and blood and stone-wall reality.

Poetic Psychologist

LOVE IS ALL by Joseph and Lois Bird; Doubleday, 192 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Psychologist Joseph Bird and his wife have adopted an original and stimulating approach in this book.

Through the poetry form, they discuss realistically yet sensitively the fundamental joys, sorrows and experiences of marital, family and community life.

Their audience: God.

Thus the subtitle: "Conversations of a Husband and Wife with God."

The resulting book makes for reading that is refreshing and touching, whether the Birds are discussing the wife's pregnancy, a meal for which belated thanks is offered, Christmas, a child's illness, community service or a daughter's birthday. The language is as down-to-earth as the subjects. A remarkable record of the real beauty of day-to-day Christian living is the result, making the book a small literary gem.

The Quiet Lands, In Text And Photo

By DON KEOWN

DESERT SOLITAIRE by Edward Abbey; McGraw-Hill; 269 pages, $5.95.

NAVAJO WILDLANDS "As Long As the Rivers Shall Run" by Stephen C. Jett; Sierra Club, 158 pages, $25.

Man is reproducing himself at a spiraling, dizzying pace, while at the same time destroying many of the earth's other species.

But what this planet really needs, writes outspoken Edward Abbey, novelist and outdoor enthusiast, is fewer, not more people and their domesticated pets, and more, not fewer, of the wild creatures, particularly the disappearing predators such as the coyotes, the eagle, the mountain lion and the scorpion.

Only in the desert is Abbey still able to find something approaching the balance he believes desirable. Man, with his propensity for cool, wet places, has largely shunned the desert. But in its arid, sun-drenched environs, an amazing array of hardier animal life thrives, relatively immune, so far, from the ravages inflicted upon them elsewhere by the two-legged killer and despoiler who has caused such devastation elsewhere.

Abbey writes about all these in "Desert Solitaire," based upon time he spent in Utah's Arches National Monument as a seasonal park ranger.

He does not picture the desert naively or romantically. He presents it exactly as it is. For that is the way he likes it — rugged, hot, dry, wild and lonely.

But, Abbey adds, desert conditions must be assessed within their context. Thus he denies that the desert has too little water. It has exactly the amount it needs to be what it is — the desert. Any more, any less would destroy its fascinating character.

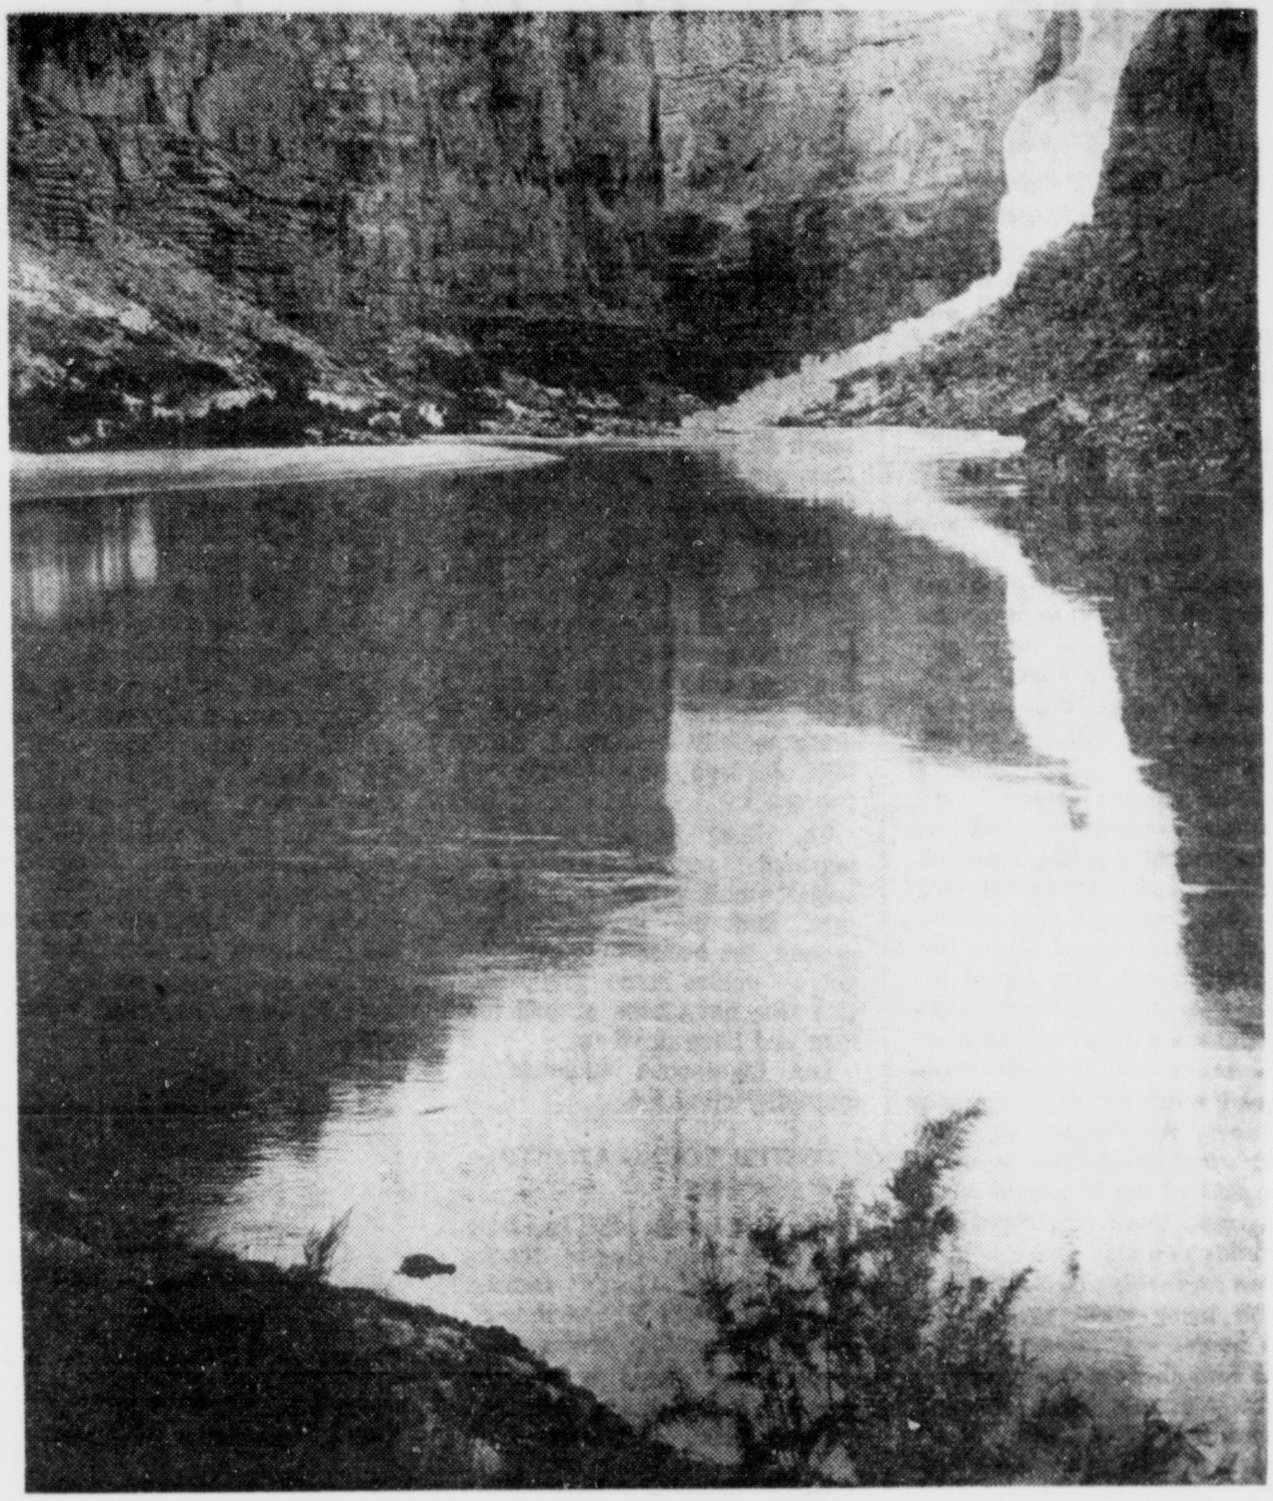
There are those who love the mountains, the ocean shores, the plains, even the cities. Abbey loves the desert. And he presents a strong case for it. A second reading may well wean us from our preference for the mountains or the seashore.

But Abbey is not seeking the kind of converts who will rush to the desert. In too large numbers they would only crowd and ruin it. He wants the kind of converts who, instead, will work to keep the desert exactly as it is. For there is, he warns, a very real danger that man — the tourist, the cultivator, the developer, the exploiter, especially the compulsive dam-builder — will ultimately destroy the desert in his persistent efforts to shape it to his own needs and likings.

The Abbey message is pretty much the same "save the wilderness" appeal that has been voiced by the Sierra Club. But Abbey is more plainspoken, more biting in his denunciation of man's proclivity for meddling with and marring nature.

His book is an important and impressive one, as well as interesting and entertaining, the product of a writer with both sensitivity and force.

FOR A spectacular demonstration of why Edward Abbey and others are drawn by the desert country, we recommend to you the Sierra Club's latest publishing spectacular in its Exhibit Format Series, "Navajo Wildlands 'As Long As the Rivers Shall Run'."



THIS PHILIP HYDE photograph of Marble Gorge is all the more impressive in spectacular color as it appears on page 154 of the Sierra Club's latest Exhibit Format Series book, "Navajo Wildlands."

This big and beautiful book boasts the splendid color photography of Philip Hyde plus an unusual collaboration on the text.

Prof. Stephen C. Jett, an authority on the Southwest, is the chief author. But he borrows from two novelists who set their best fiction in that region, Willa Cather and Oliver La Farge, as well as from Navajo religion and legend. There are shorter excerpts from such as Clarence Dutton and Joseph Wood Krutch, plus forewords by David Brower and photographer Hyde.

This approach is in some ways very effective and in other ways less so than the standard text. On the whole, however, we think we preferred Krutch's brilliant, coordinated narrative for the recently published volume of Baja California.

"Navajo Wildlands" differs from most of the other books in the series, too, in that it pays somewhat greater attention to the people associated with its region.

But the wildlands themselves as shown in Hyde's splendiferous photography are unquestionably the star attraction of the book.

As always, the Sierra Club does not miss an opportunity to make a conservation point, noting how overuse of the soil has damaged and diminished this area, and stressing the need for greater regard and protection for the land and what it supports naturally.

Perhaps one might prepare for Abbey's book by first exploring the Sierra Club volume. The land it presents is not quite the same as the even harsher, even more desolate Utah country about which Abbey writes. But the appeal to the senses and to the soul is much the same.

PEG BRACKEN'S blending of fun and information, "I Try to Behave Myself," heads the latest list of Fawcett paperback reprints.

Appearing along with that lighthearted guide on etiquette is a collection of Bil Keane's "The Family Circus" cartoons that are so popular with Independent-Journal readers; "Official Rules of Card Games" as compiled by Albert H. Morehead with the new contract bridge international regulations along with the rules to some 300 other games; John D. MacDonald's Travis McGee crime adventure "A Deadly Shade of Gold," and Norman Vincent Peale's "The Tough-Minded Optimist."

Irving Howe's "Literary Modernism" appears as a Premier paperback original, and offers that critic's incisive views of modern writers and writing.

It is a bumper crop from one of the most versatile and most interesting of the paperback publishing houses.

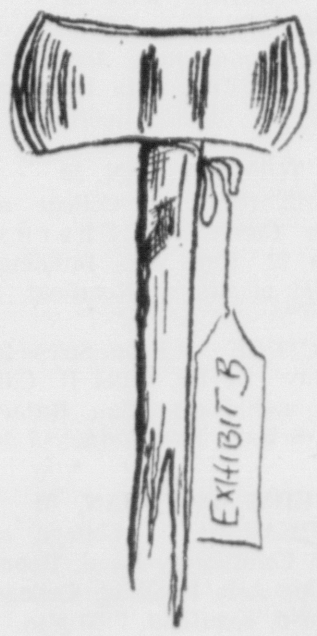
INSPECTOR GHOTE CAUGHT IN THE MESHES by H. R. F. Keating; Dutton, 215 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.



Inspector Ganesh Ghote of the Bombay police has won himself a large following among mystery novel fans with his previous exploits. We think they'll find this one his best yet.

This time the very human inspector finds himself involved in the investigation of the murder of a visiting American. What at first seems simple though deadly dacoite develops into something much more involved.

Before it is over, Ghote is assigned to a secret Indian undercover agency working against an ultra-nationalistic organization bent on taking over the government.

And with him are an American scientist, more hindrance than help at times, and an attractive young girl from the Indian tourist bureau.

The story moves along at a fast clip with all the usual interesting Keating character nuances and geographical color. It's another Keating-Ghote triumph.

LOUDNESS CONTROL— What is it and how do you use it? Many years ago, two physicists, Mr. Fletcher and Mr. Munson, made some hearing tests using groups of people. After reviewing and tabulating the results they introduced a set of curves called the Fletcher Munson Curves. What these tests and curves show is that human hearing is not linear; that is, what we hear varies with the volume of the sound.

At full concert volumes, such as found in symphony halls or ballrooms, the ear hears the full spectrum of sound from the very low tones through the middle range of tones and up to the very high tones with equal intensity. At lower volumes, the ear does not hear the bass or lower tones with as much intensity as it hears the middle range of tones. As the volume gets lower and lower, the hearing drops off at the bass end more and more. There is a slight loss at the high end.

How does this affect listening to the home music system? In most homes the volume is kept quite low. If a recording or FM radio program were played through the system and the electronics amplified all of the audio spectrum from the low tones up through the high tones with equal intensity, the ear would not hear much bass. Because of the Fletcher Munson effect, the program would consist mostly of middle range tones. A full range high quality music system without compensation for hearing would sound like a table model radio when used at low volumes. However, most quality home music systems and component systems have compensation built into the electronics to overcome the bass deficiency at low volumes.

Generally there is a switch or control marked "Loudness" or "Contour" that allows the user to switch in the compensation when the listening volume is adjusted for average room volume. In essence, the electronics in the circuit when the loudness or contour is switched "in" or "on" is boosting the bass tones an amount that is proportionate to the hearing loss at the respective volume. The softer the set is played, the more the bass compensation and the louder the set is played, the less the bass compensation. For loud room volumes, since the hearing is more even throughout the audio spectrum, the loudness or contour is not required.

For proper sound balance, the loudness or contour control or switch should be turned "on" for the lower volumes, and turned "off" for louder room volumes.

MJQ LIVE AT THE LIGHTHOUSE — Atlantic SD 1486:

A new album by the Modern Jazz Quartet is always an event.

This is the first LP they have ever recorded in a nightclub appearance. They have long been partial to the concert stage, and in their formal dress look as much at home on the stage of Carnegie Hall or the Chicago Opera House as a string quartet.

Recorded at the famous modern jazz hangout in Hermosa Beach, the seven tunes on this LP are new on record for the MJQ as far as I know. The two new ones by John Lewis, "The Spiritual" and "Baseball," are especially interesting. Vibist Milt Jackson also contributes two tracks.

The MJQ is the most integrated, sophisticated and subtle small group in modern jazz, and the longer they're around, the better they seem to get — unlike some groups in jazz who have been around too long and have dried up.

The Lighthouse audience is unusually quiet too.

LESTER YOUNG AT JATP — VSP VSPS-41:

Verve's bargain label has here preserved four classic tracks from Norman Granz' famous "Jazz at the Philharmonic" series of traveling concerts.

The mono sound is not the greatest, but Young's solos are without peer. Add the other greats on the sessions: Charlie Parker, Flip Phillips, Coleman Hawkins, Buddy Rich, and you really have some performances to be treasured.

This album preserves part of a live concert the talented pianist gave in New York last year. His subtle and complex piano work lends itself better really to a concert presentation than a noisy jazz club.

It is amazing how quiet the audience was at this concert, attending to Bill's impressionistic treatments of tunes like "I Should Care," and "Make Someone Happy," as well as his extended composition, "Solo In Memory of His Father."

Evans is completely unique and deserves as prestigious a position in keyboard art today as Van Cliburn or Artur Rubinstein.

POET'S CORNER

TO GEN. DOUGLAS MACARTHUR

A caisson rolling in the rain,
A casket-bearing caisson in the rain
And you beyond all rain or shine,
Incredible!
We need you now!
Now, more than ever, need you.

O speak to us from those Korean hills,
There where you made the plan
How victory could be won.
Speak to us from the rolling Yalu!
It could have held the invader 60 years,
Wise men declared, which is to say forever

Speak to us from Corregidor
Redeeming earlier loss and pain.
Where you returned in might,
So may we of this people blest,
Should any one despair of peace
Toward which we yearn,
Be not too proud to say
That by your faith and principles
Renewed this day — we shall
In victory return.

Be Sure To Read The Print

Forget about that customary set of 10 home handyman resolutions for the new year. Instead, let's consider a single resolution that might be worded this way:

I resolve to read and follow the instructions on the container of whatever I buy!

Don't throw up your hands in indignation. Of course — you say — you read the instructions. And, of course, you follow them.

But do you? REALLY?

Let's take a typical example.

A MAN purchases a can of paint. He takes it home and reads the directions on the back of the can. He discovers that the manufacturer recommends a particular kind of thinner, which he doesn't have on hand. Not anxious to make another trip to the hardware or paint store, he uses the thinner he happens to have on hand.

He has used it in the past and found it quite satisfactory, ignoring the fact that it was used with a different type of paint.

When the result isn't quite what he thought it would be, he blames the paint or, if he is the kind of person who lacks confidence in his own ability, he feels that he somehow failed to do the job properly because of his ineptness.

THE EXAMPLES of failure to follow instructions, whether deliberately or carelessly, are endless in their variety. But there is one phase of this matter that affects the great majority of do-it-yourselfers. And it's the reason for the question of whether you really do follow instructions. To explain it, let's get back to that can of paint.

Assume that the purchaser followed the directions in every detail including the use of the proper thinner. When he finished his project, he had a half a can of paint left. Rare indeed is the occasion when the amount of paint and the surface to be covered come out even.

Carefully tightening the cover on the paint can, the man placed it on a shelf and went on to other things. During the next two or three months, he performed other do-it-yourself tasks, some of which involved the use of other paints, varnish, shellac, adhesives and waxes. Then, one day, he found a new use for the remainder of that paint he had placed on a shelf.

DID HE read the instructions again?

If he was like most of us, he did not, since once we have used a product we are inclined to feel that we know how to handle it.

What he did not realize was that, having used many other products since he bought the first paint, including some that were similar but not identical, he had only a general idea of its proper usage. After all, paint is paint.

But it really isn't. Not in this day and age, when there are literally thousands of different kinds of paint, each with its own particular properties and requiring strict adherence to definite procedures.

The Azalea Story—

Garden Pages

Most people think of azaleas as spring-blooming shrubs; yet when you stop to consider this remarkable plant, you realize that most people are wrong.

Azaleas begin their bloom in the fall, carry it through winter and are still going strong when March rolls around.

You see azaleas in bloom as early as September and as late as June.

OF COURSE, there are several different forms of azalea offered by nurserymen, and many different varieties in each form. Not all bloom at the same time, which accounts for the long, long show of this "spring" beauty.

Right now, for instance there are several named azaleas blooming in nurseries, and all of them are members of the group we call Belgian Indicas.

This is a varied group of hybrid azaleas with mostly double flowers and a wide range of colors. The light pink variety Sweet Sixteen is a member of this group. So is the popular salmon-colored Paul Schame, the pink and rose Dr. Bergman and two or three dozen others.

They are mostly shade-loving and like all azaleas want a rich, acidic and well-drained soil.

THE SOUTHERN Indicas, also called Sun Azaleas, are increasing in popularity, not only because of their tolerance for warmer conditions, but for their larger size and consequent larger display of bloom.

They are not truly sun-loving as the name implies, but they do show greater tolerance for sun than the Belgian Indicas.

An open west exposure is to be avoided, however. These are later blooming: March to June here in the north. But they can be planted now.

The Japanese Kurume azaleas are mostly found here in California, as are most of the deciduous forms such as the Mollis hybrids, which thrive in the redwood belt and in Oregon.

These are well worth growing wherever a nurseryman indicates that they have a good chance of thriving.

As with all azaleas, and rhododendrons, too, they want well-drained soil, rich in leaf mold or peat moss or bark and regular feeding with an acid-type food or liquid fish or both.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- If you're in doubt as to how you should prune roses, ask a nurseryman for advice.
- Many garden pests are slowed to a standstill by winter weather, but not snails and slugs. Control them with pellets or bait.
- Plant roses and other deciduous shrubs now. Also plant deciduous fruit trees, grapes and berries now during their bareroot season.
- Spray peach trees to prevent leaf curl if you haven't already done so.

- Cyclamen may be set out in a well-drained, protected location for immediate bloom.
- Give frost-stricken plants a little time to recuperate from the shock before removing damaged appendages.

There's Always Room For An Orchard, If You Plan It Right

You don't need an estate sized garden to plant a home orchard.

Most modern homes have enough space around them to accommodate two or more fruit trees. And even a sun deck is big enough for an "orchard" full of dwarf peaches like the diminutive Bonanza, first true dwarf on the market.

The California Association of Nurserymen lists several possible ways to make fruit trees fit small gardens.

Various fruits are available on dwarfing root-stock and at maturity these are only about half the size of orchard trees. Others can be found budded with more than one variety on a single rootstock.

And still others, notably pears and apples, may be trained in espalier form for growing flat against a house or garden wall.

The most important thing to remember in planting orchard fruit trees is to make sure the variety is adapted to our climate. Always consult with a nurseryman before planting, and never bring a fruit tree into our area from another area, assuming it will do equally well.

The complete home orchardist will try to grow more than just the standard fruit trees.

Given the required space, his planting will also include a nut tree or two. Walnuts, almonds and pecans are all adapted to home use, especially when their shade can be utilized in the garden as well as their crop.

Most fruit trees, other than citrus and tropical fruits such as guavas, are dormant now and available in nurseries in their bareroot form. This is the easiest and safest time to plant these trees. Also the least expensive time. You'll be surprised to discover just how inexpensive a bareroot fruit tree can be. And seldom in any field will such a minimum investment grow into such a good thing — or things, if you prefer.

Flowering Vines Add Touch Of Beauty In California

There are only a handful of deciduous flowering vines grown in California, but they are a beautiful and bountiful lot.

The Wisterias, both Chinese and Japanese, a variety of Clematis and Chilean Jasmine — all have striking characteristics of bloom that make them highly recommended. All may be planted now, during their dormant season.

Wisteria is the most bountiful of all vines, a twining and twisting climber with vigor enough to cover a country mile. Mature vines are truly fantastic when in bloom, smothered by their crop of long lavender or white clusters.

You can train these vines up a corner of the house and along an eave for marvelous effects.

The Clematis family offers some remarkably beautiful and exotic bloom for California gardeners. Except for one evergreen variety that blooms in spring, these are summer-flowering vines.

The white Henry Clematis produces magnificent blooms up to eight inches across. Use it on a trellis or work it up a pillar.

Chilean Jasmine is grown for its flowers primarily, then for the tracery it provides. The former are flaring, trumpet shaped white blooms with an unbelievably fragrant aroma in summer. The leaves are heart-shaped and pleasant when grown on a pillar or along an eave.

Some Expert Advice On Feeding Of Houseplant: Don't Overdo It

It All Depends Upon How Much Light They Are Receiving

Walter Haldeman of Pennsylvania State University says soil fertilization is a misunderstood phase of houseplant culture.

Most plants are overfed, he adds, except those that aren't fertilized at all.

According to a Penn State correspondence course on home floriculture, the need for fertilizers depends on the amount of light plants receive.

Light intensity and duration govern food making. Plants can use only as much fertilizer as they are able to incorporate into the food they manufacture in the leaves.

Young, actively growing plants take more feeding than those older and more mature.

Use the plants as guides. If new leaves are progressively smaller and less green than older foliage, apply fertilizer. Many plants need only three or four feedings a year.

Let Matson show you the best of the South Seas. Cruise to Bora Bora, Tahiti, Rarotonga, New Zealand, Australia, Noumea, Fiji, Niuafo'ou, Pago Pago and Hawaii. Throughout the 42-day voyage your ship will be the yacht-like SS Mariposa or the SS Monterey. Both were specially designed for South Pacific cruising, with an intimate, congenial atmosphere about them.

This spring we've scheduled four special cruises through the enchanting South Seas which feature 20% savings. These four cruises are exactly the same as our regular South Seas cruises except for one thing . . . the fares are lower. The reduction is 20% from each one way fare for the round trip cruise. Departures are from San Francisco March 28, April 22, May 12 and June 6; Los Angeles the following day.

Why not come along?

For all the details contact your travel agent or Paul Thompson, Matson Cruise Consultant.

SAFETY INFORMATION: SS Mariposa and SS Monterey, registered in the U. S., meet International Safety Standards for new ships developed in 1960.
